NIGHT WATCHMAN DIES A REAL HERO IN CHICAGO TODAY

STOPPED BANDIT ATTEMPT TO EXPLODE SHRAPNEL-LADEN DYNAMITE BOMB

FEARLESSNESS OF WM. MAYER, 60, SPOILED THEIR ROBBERY PLANS

Chicago, March 3.—(U.P.) — William Mayer, 60, a night watchman, died a hero today, from machine gun wounds received during a fight over an attempt to explode a shrapnel-laden dynamite bomb. His fearlessness harried the would-be bombers into spoiling their own plans.

Mayer's slayers escaped after throwing a bystander into a basement with the lighted bomb. They disappeared before they learned that the fuse sputtered out before reaching the explosive.

Unlike hundreds of bombs that have been exploded here just to damage property, this huge bomb, police said, was planted to kill.

Had it exploded, the officers said, it would have completely demolished the brick building under which it was placed and might have killed persons in buildings a block away.

Five men placed the bomb under a Blue Island building in which is located a gambling place said to be operated by James Hackett.

William Mayer, 60, night watchman at the place, was critically hurt when he attempted to fight the bombers. His legs were riddled by machine gun fire.

Hilario Rodriguez, 35, a Mexican, was an unfortunate witness of the murder attempt. He saw the five men drop the bomb, which was 26 inches long and contained pulverized dynamite and shrapnel, into a coal chute under the Hackett building.

To remove Rodriguez as a witness, the bombers beat him, breaking his jaw, and tossed him down the coal chute after the bomb. He climbed out and was grazed by one of the bullets fired at Mayer.

Members of the police bomb squad said the bomb did not explode because the fuse went out when it struck the floor of the damp basement.

Attracted by the shooting, hundreds of people gathered near the building. They were driven back by police while firemen flooded the basement before removing the bomb.

Five Day Loss of Memory Probably from Plane Accident

Monterey, Calif., March 3.—(U.P.)—Edna Mae Cooper, Hollywood film actress and aviator who dazedly wandered about Monterey while all California hunted her, may have suffered her five-day "loss of memory" in an airplane accident, friends and authorities believed today.

The actress, in a serious condition from bruises and a severe blow on the head, was herself mystified by the strange series of events that brought her 350 miles from Hollywood to a room in a Monterey hospital.

It was just like a movie thriller, the cinema player related today in telling how she took off in her airplane for Santa Monica last week to rest and rid herself of a headache. She remembers nothing else. How she got to Monterey, registered at a hotel as "Caroline Hope," walked about the seaside resort and finally summoned a physician to treat the headache, were figments of memory that deserted her when she "came to."

Dr. Hugh Dormody of Monterey, whose questioning of Miss Cooper led her to reveal her identity, said the injuries probably were due to an accidental fall or a beating. Miss Cooper could recall nothing beyond the take-off in her airplane, and believed she was in Santa Monica until Dr. Dormody told her she was in Monterey.

MORRISON COUNTY SEEKS NEW JAIL

Little Falls, Minn., March 3—(UP)—All of Morrison county's commissioners have signed a bill sent to the legislature proposing a special tax levy for the construction of a new $40,000 county jail, it was announced today.

Under the bill a special assessment of three mils would be made for one year to obtain the funds. The county already has set aside annual appropriations until a total of $16,000 has been obtained.

ENRAGED BULL GORES FARMER TO DEATH

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 3.—(U.P.)—A suddenly enraged bull gored T. A. Huortari to death at Butler, north of here, according to a message received from there today. The animal always had been gentle but turned suddenly when Huortari attempted to drive it into the barn. His mangled body was discovered some time after the bull had killed him.

TEXAS RANGERS ARE 'CLEANING UP' TOWN OF KILGORE

LAWLESS ELEMENT IS DRIVEN FROM MUSHUROOM OIL BOOM TOWN

SPEAKEASIES, GAMBLING PARLORS, ROOMING HOUSES OF ILL REPUTE CLOSED

Kilgore, Texas, March 3.—(U.P.)—Ten Texas Rangers, bent on removing the lawless element from this mushroom oil boom town, found speakeasies, gambling parlors and houses of ill repute deserted today.

Three hundred suspicious characters, lured here by traditional easy money and morals of oil fields, were missing. They were arrested by the Rangers in a wholesale drive yesterday.

Twenty were held in Longview jail. The others disappeared after they were finger-printed by experts from Dallas and released.

Establishments of unsavory reputation which were opened in the wake of the town's sudden change from a sleepy village of 500 inhabitants to a boom center of 10,000 were as decorous as a church.

The First Baptist church was transformed into an emergency base of operations. Every oil field worker, roustabout, and "floater" in the town was escorted to the church.

Not a shot was fired, and a single Ranger often herded as many as a score of prisoners from a domino hall through the muddy streets.

2 BANDITS HOLD UP VESTA BANK

FORCE 2 EMPLOYES INTO VAULT, ESCAPE WITH ABOUT $8,000

Vesta, Minn., March 3.—(U.P.)—Two bandits held up the State Bank of Vesta today, forced the cashier and girl bookkeeper into the vault and escaped with more than $1,000 in cash and approximately $7,000 in negotiable bonds.

B. L. Thomas, cashier, said the exact amount of the loot would be unknown until insurance company officials had made a checkup. He said that the bank was left with "only a few nickels."

Thomas and Wilma Rust, the bookkeeper, were alone in the bank when the bandits entered. They raised their hands at the robbers' orders and stood at their desks until the vault had been emptied.

"Get in there," one of the bandits ordered, and forced the two employes to enter the vault. He then slammed the door, but did not lock it.

After remaining in the vault less than five minutes, the cashier and the bookkeeper heard the bandits' automobile drive away. They found that the cashier's cage and money drawer had been emptied.

ANOTHER 'FIGHT' IS TALK OF HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood, March 3.—(U.P.)—Another "fight" in which Myron J. Selznick, player's agent, was the central figure, was the talk of Hollywood today, although most of the witnesses and participants declined to discuss the incident.

It was learned, however, that Mrs. Verna Chalif, cousin of Mary Pickford, was struck in the eye by a piece of hot tallow plucked from a candle, while she was dancing with William Bakewell, screen actor, at the exclusive Embassy club.

Bakewell, it was understood, started for Selznick's table when he saw who threw the tallow, but was stopped by Lewis Milestone, director, who prevented an open breach in the exclusive motion picture gathering place.

OLSON CAMPAIGN FOR EFFICIENCY AGAIN TO FRONT

SENATE LATE TODAY TO CONSIDER HOLMBERG CONFIRMATION

DUXBURY'S APPOINTMENT AS INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER ALSO CONSIDERED

St. Paul, Minn., March 3.—(U.P.)—Gov. Floyd B. Olson's campaign to "put efficiency and reliability in power in the state capitol" came to the fore again today in the Minnesota legislature.

The senate was scheduled late today to consider confirmation of N. J. Holmberg, as state agricultural commissioner. Simultaneously, F. A. Duxbury's appointment as industrial commissioner was to be discussed by the senate workmen's compensation committee.

Both Holmberg and Duxbury were reappointed by former Governor Theodore Christianson on his last day in office. They are opposed by Gov. Olson. Both cases were scheduled to be argued today at 2 P. M.

Holmberg's recent denial of a list of charges made against him by Governor Olson was the chief topic of discussion as senators met to consider his case. The commissioner denied that he was building up a political organization or that he intended being a candidate for governor in 1932.

Olson also charged that Holmberg's administration had been unfair to agriculture, which also was denied by the commissioner.

Senator Gerald A. Mullen of Minneapolis, one of the youngest members of the upper house, has led the opposition to Duxbury's confirmation. He has charged that Duxbury has been unfair to labor in industrial disputes.

The campaign against Holmberg has been the dominant issue in Olson's opposition to confirmation of 122 interim appointments made by Christianson. At one time the governor offered to withdraw his objections to the other 121 appointees if Holmberg's name was removed from the list of appointments.

Senator Milton Lightner of St. Paul announced late yesterday that the compensation committee will take final action on the Duxbury case at a meeting which was called for today.

SCHACHT HAS DRASTIC PLAN TO AID GERMANY

WANTS REVISION OF ALL INTERNATIONAL WAR DEBTS, INTER-ALLIED AND GERMAN

REVOCATION OF VERSAILLES TREATY PLACING WAR GUILT ON THE TEUTONS

By FREDERICK LAUDON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Stockholm, March 3.—A drastic program demanding sensational international action to meet "the present economic and moral crisis" was presented tonight by Dr. Hjalmer Schacht, former president of the reichsbank and recognized as one of the most influential financial authorities of Germany.

Speaking at the Grand Hotel under auspices of the Swedo-German Society, Dr. Schacht demanded:

1. Revision of all international war debts, both interallied and German.
2. Revocation of the Versailles treaty clause placing the world war "guilt" on Germany.
3. Restitution of the colonies taken from Germany as a result of the war.

"Only conscious international co-operation can help the world to overcome the present economic and moral crisis," said Dr. Schacht in continuing his campaign for suspension of reparations payments by Germany at a time when the German government, lead by Dr. Hans Luther, the reichsbank president, has been reiterating that Germany will scrupulously observe her reparations obligations.

Dr. Schacht, who was one of the framers of the Young reparations plan, recently has been in sharp conflict with the government on the question of declaring suspension of payments, which he has described as absolutely necessary in view of present economic conditions. At the time of his resignation as reichsbank president—due to his charges that the Young plan had been mutilated—Dr. Schacht threatened to increase greatly his political power, but more recently has been less prominent in political affairs in Germany.

"World commerce needs expansion instead of decrease," Dr. Schacht said in his speech. "Expansion may be achieved through international financing of undeveloped commerce. It also would require co-operation of banks of issue which would extend international credits.

"International war debts, both interallied and German reparations, hinder the organized development of the international money market. Hence it is imperative that they be adapted to the economic resources of the debtors.

"The false pretense of Germany's war guilt poisons the moral atmosphere and, therefore, it is necessary that international arbiters revise it.

"The colonies must be returned to enable Germany to meet from them, in part, at least, her need for raw materials.

"Only after liquidation of the old war-begotten prejudices can the prevailing universal mistrust be replaced by promising international co-operation."

The theatrical man left Stillwater for Minneapolis, where he built a reputation during the several years he was there. Then he went to New York to manage the Capitol theater. Building his own theater followed his Broadway success.

129 PROTEST SEWER ON CLAIMS OF COST TO BE BURDENSOME

SECOND VOTE IN EFFORT TO BREAK TIE EXPECTED AT NEXT MEETING

OIL MEN WIN FIGHT TO EXCLUDE DYKING CLAUSE FROM OIL ORDINANCE

Death of the major item of the proposed oil ordinance, that section pertaining to the dyking of bulk storage tanks; a request that the Charter Commission meet and propose such revisions in the city charter as necessary by the city's new population classification; and a deadlocked vote when attempt was made to lay on the table indefinitely further action for a downtown relief storm sewer came as highlights of an important city council meeting last evening.

A final plea to retain the dyking clause as a safety measure to human life and property was made by Fire Chief Frank Fuller, foster parent of the proposed ordinance.

Spokesmen for oil dealers informed the council that inclusion of such a paragraph would force them to remove their bulk stations out of the city limits.

Three alderman stuck with the fire chief who said: "If you strike out dyking you are removing the most important part of the ordinance."

These aldermen were Chris Elvig, W. J. Hall and Ernest Ritari.

Favorable to the ordinance but believing dyking would be too drastic, the following aldermen favored the striking of the section ordering the dyking: V. F. Anderson, H. W. Creger, Elmer Lee, W. J. Lyonais and V. E. Quanstrom.

Seeing in the ordinance many valuable measures the council voted unanimously on the next vote to give the ordinance in its amended form the first reading.

Charter Revision Seen

Brainerd, now a city of the third class by reasons of its increase in population over 10,000 (10,221) promises to have its city charter revised to meet such requirements.

A resolution, drafted by City Attorney D. H. Fullerton, was presented to the council and voted upon unanimously. It calls for a meeting of the Charter Commission to consider the advisability of proposing such amendments and alterations to the present city charter as the Charter Commission deems advisable.

No definite revision of the city charter is expected for months since much concentrated study must be done on it.

Relief Sewer Protested

A petition carrying the names of 129 property owners in the Fifth Ward and a portion of the First Ward which would be affected by the proposed construction of a relief sewer and the assessments and costs of such construction protested the construction of the sewer on the grounds that they were not financially able to pay the cost and were of the opinion that another system could be devised to remedy the present congested condition of the business district sewers than the system proposed.

The vote to defer action indefinitely resulted in a deadlocked vote. Those favoring the motion to lay the proposition on the table indefinitely were: Aldermen H. W. Creger, Chris Elvig, W. J. Lyonais and V. E. Quanstrom. Desirous of keeping alive action and favoring the relief sewer were: Aldermen V. F. Anderson, W. J. Hall, Elmer Lee and Ernest Ritari.

No attempt was made to introduce another vote to break the tie. The council favored another vote on the sewer at the next meeting.

"I do not believe these petitioners know what they are objecting to. The cost will not be great and it will be a great improvement to downtown Brainerd if it is passed," Alderman Hall said.

City Engineer R. T. Campbell gave the information that the cost would be assessed on the basis of $15 a 50-foot lot.

"It will be a mighty fine thing if it can be done," Alderman Anderson said.

Fullers' Safety Plea

The plea of Fire Chief Frank Fuller to pass the oil ordinance in its complete form is herewith given:

"I hope you will not take the attitude that this ordinance means anything to me personally, as such is not the case.

"I am offering it because it is my duty to protect our citizens and their property from the possible ravages of fire, as well as to supervise the extinguishing of the fires after they ignite.

"And as I see it, you should adopt this ordinance as a protective measure for the citizens whom you are here to represent.

"I believe the safety of their lives and property is more to be considered by you and I than are the interests of a dozen companies who have bulk storage plants in our city for the purpose of storing flammable liquids to

OLSON CAMPAIGN FOR EFFICIENCY AGAIN TO FRONT

SENATE LATE TODAY TO CONSIDER HOLMBERG CONFIRMATION

DUXBURY'S APPOINTMENT AS INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER ALSO CONSIDERED

St. Paul, Minn., March 3.—(U.P.)—Gov. Floyd B. Olson's campaign to "put efficiency and reliability in power in the state capitol" came to the fore again today in the Minnesota legislature.

The senate was scheduled late today to consider confirmation of N. J. Holmberg, as state agricultural commissioner. Simultaneously, F. A. Duxbury's appointment as industrial commissioner was to be discussed by the senate workmen's compensation committee.

Both Holmberg and Duxbury were reappointed by former Governor Theodore Christianson on his last day in office. They are opposed by Gov. Olson. Both cases were scheduled to be argued today at 2 P. M.

Holmberg's recent denial of a list of charges made against him by Governor Olson was the chief topic of discussion as senators met to consider his case. The commissioner denied that he was building up a political organization or that he intended being a candidate for governor in 1932.

Olson also charged that Holmberg's administration had been unfair to agriculture, which also was denied by the commissioner.

Senator Gerald A. Mullen of Minneapolis, one of the youngest members of the upper house, has led the opposition to Duxbury's confirmation. He has charged that Duxbury has been unfair to labor in industrial disputes.

The campaign against Holmberg has been the dominant issue in Olson's opposition to confirmation of 122 interim appointments made by Christianson. At one time the governor offered to withdraw his objections to the other 121 appointees if Holmberg's name was removed from the list of appointments.

Senator Milton Lightner of St. Paul announced late yesterday that the compensation committee will take final action on the Duxbury case at a meeting which was called for today.

Townsend Bill, Taxing Colored Oleomargarine, is Passed by Senate

Washington, March 3. — (U.P.) — The Townsend bill imposing a tax of 10 cents upon all colored oleomargarine was passed 68 to 9 by the senate last night.

An effort by Senator Reed, Rep., Pa., to bring up the house resolution cutting immigration quotas 90 per cent for the next two years was blocked when the senate rejected by a vote of 34 to 22 Reed's motion to suspend the rules and take up the measure.

RAZOR THAT NICKED CHIN OF 'ALFALFA BILL' PRESERVED

SCHACHT HAS DRASTIC PLAN TO AID GERMANY

WANTS REVISION OF ALL INTERNATIONAL WAR DEBTS, INTER-ALLIED AND GERMAN

REVOCATION OF VERSAILLES TREATY PLACING WAR GUILT ON THE TEUTONS

By FREDERICK LAUDON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Stockholm, March 3.—A drastic program demanding sensational international action to meet "the present economic and moral crisis" was presented tonight by Dr. Hjalmer Schacht, former president of the reichsbank and recognized as one of the most influential financial authorities of Germany.

Speaking at the Grand Hotel under auspices of the Swedo-German Society, Dr. Schacht demanded:

1. Revision of all international war debts, both interallied and German.
2. Revocation of the Versailles treaty clause placing the world war "guilt" on Germany.
3. Restitution of the colonies taken from Germany as a result of the war.

"Only conscious international co-operation can help the world to overcome the present economic and moral crisis," said Dr. Schacht in continuing his campaign for suspension of reparations payments by Germany at a time when the German government, lead by Dr. Hans Luther, the reichsbank president, has been reiterating that Germany will scrupulously observe her reparations obligations.

Dr. Schacht, who was one of the framers of the Young reparations plan, recently has been in sharp conflict with the government on the question of declaring suspension of payments, which he has described as absolutely necessary in view of present economic conditions. At the time of his resignation as reichsbank president—due to his charges that the Young plan had been mutilated—Dr. Schacht threatened to increase greatly his political power, but more recently has been less prominent in political affairs in Germany.

"World commerce needs expansion instead of decrease," Dr. Schacht said in his speech. "Expansion may be achieved through international financing of undeveloped commerce. It also would require co-operation of banks of issue which would extend international credits.

"International war debts, both interallied and German reparations, hinder the organized development of the international money market. Hence it is imperative that they be adapted to the economic resources of the debtors.

"The false pretense of Germany's war guilt poisons the moral atmosphere and, therefore, it is necessary that international arbiters revise it.

"The colonies must be returned to enable Germany to meet from them, in part, at least, her need for raw materials.

"Only after liquidation of the old war-begotten prejudices can the prevailing universal mistrust be replaced by promising international co-operation."

Roxey is on a theatrical tour which will bring him to Minneapolis. He wrote to local friends that he expected to spend a day with them while appearing in the nearby metropolis.

The theatrical man left Stillwater for Minneapolis, where he built a reputation during the several years he was there. Then he went to New York to manage the Capitol theater. Building his own theater followed his Broadway success.

129 PROTEST SEWER ON CLAIMS OF COST TO BE BURDENSOME

SECOND VOTE IN EFFORT TO BREAK TIE EXPECTED AT NEXT MEETING

OIL MEN WIN FIGHT TO EXCLUDE DYKING CLAUSE FROM OIL ORDINANCE

Death of the major item of the proposed oil ordinance, that section pertaining to the dyking of bulk storage tanks; a request that the Charter Commission meet and propose such revisions in the city charter as necessary by the city's new population classification; and a deadlocked vote when attempt was made to lay on the table indefinitely further action for a downtown relief storm sewer came as highlights of an important city council meeting last evening.

A final plea to retain the dyking clause as a safety measure to human life and property was made by Fire Chief Frank Fuller, foster parent of the proposed ordinance.

Spokesmen for oil dealers informed the council that inclusion of such a paragraph would force them to remove their bulk stations out of the city limits.

Three alderman stuck with the fire chief who said: "If you strike out dyking you are removing the most important part of the ordinance."

These aldermen were Chris Elvig, W. J. Hall and Ernest Ritari.

Favorable to the ordinance but believing dyking would be too drastic, the following aldermen favored the striking of the section ordering the dyking: V. F. Anderson, H. W. Creger, Elmer Lee, W. J. Lyonais and V. E. Quanstrom.

Seeing in the ordinance many valuable measures the council voted unanimously on the next vote to give the ordinance in its amended form the first reading.

Charter Revision Seen

Brainerd, now a city of the third class by reasons of its increase in population over 10,000 (10,221) promises to have its city charter revised to meet such requirements.

A resolution, drafted by City Attorney D. H. Fullerton, was presented to the council and voted upon unanimously. It calls for a meeting of the Charter Commission to consider the advisability of proposing such amendments and alterations to the present city charter as the Charter Commission deems advisable.

No definite revision of the city charter is expected for months since much concentrated study must be done on it.

Relief Sewer Protested

A petition carrying the names of 129 property owners in the Fifth Ward and a portion of the First Ward which would be affected by the proposed construction of a relief sewer and the assessments and costs of such construction protested the construction of the sewer on the grounds that they were not financially able to pay the cost and were of the opinion that another system could be devised to remedy the present congested condition of the business district sewers than the system proposed.

The vote to defer action indefinitely resulted in a deadlocked vote. Those favoring the motion to lay the proposition on the table indefinitely were: Aldermen H. W. Creger, Chris Elvig, W. J. Lyonais and V. E. Quanstrom. Desirous of keeping alive action and favoring the relief sewer were: Aldermen V. F. Anderson, W. J. Hall, Elmer Lee and Ernest Ritari.

No attempt was made to introduce another vote to break the tie. The council favored another vote on the sewer at the next meeting.

"I do not believe these petitioners know what they are objecting to. The cost will not be great and it will be a great improvement to downtown Brainerd if it is passed," Alderman Hall said.

City Engineer R. T. Campbell gave the information that the cost would be assessed on the basis of $15 a 50-foot lot.

"It will be a mighty fine thing if it can be done," Alderman Anderson said.

Fullers' Safety Plea

The plea of Fire Chief Frank Fuller to pass the oil ordinance in its complete form is herewith given:

"I hope you will not take the attitude that this ordinance means anything to me personally, as such is not the case.

"I am offering it because it is my duty to protect our citizens and their property from the possible ravages of fire, as well as to supervise the extinguishing of the fires after they ignite.

"And as I see it, you should adopt this ordinance as a protective measure for the citizens whom you are here to represent.

"I believe the safety of their lives and property is more to be considered by you and I than are the interests of a dozen companies who have bulk storage plants in our city for the purpose of storing flammable liquids to

Crawls Through Head of a Tennis Racquet

New York, March 3.—(UP)—King Brawman, 32, a button-hole maker of the Bronx, basked in the rosy glow of fame today. He is the first man, so far as public records reveal, to have crawled through the head of a tennis racquet in the middle of Union Square.

After this remarkable display of agility, Brawman removed his derby hat, formal coat, and pearl-gray spats, lay down on a bed of 1,200 nails, and invited the public to jump on him.

The public did, and this was duly recorded by several movie cameras.

After which Brawman climbed through the keyhole of a large wooden padlock. And when the exhibition was over, he repeated it at the request of the cameramen.

Like the white knight of "Alice in Wonderland," Brawman asserted that it was all "my own invention." He did it at home to amuse the children, he said, and decided to give the public a treat. The public, 1,000 strong, enjoyed it.

OH THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

Copyright 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Whether or not men should wear frills if they want to, and if they should be called names because they do, brings letters daily. Some men actually point back to the days when lace ruffles and satin coats and knee breeches with buckles didn't mean a man could not fight a duel or give an offender a sock in the jaw. They can't see why because times are changed, that should mean that anything more than a style has changed, and why men can't be exceedingly he, and still like buckles at their knees.

To see some of them strut in their plain clothes makes me think that in their secret hearts, a great many men would like strutting in something gay that's worth strutting over.

From Grove Point, Michigan a man writes that it is a good thing that the man from Chicago, who liked slippers and silk hose didn't let that information get out when he was in the army. He says some bitter things about him. He's wrong. Men have been enjoying their love for gay colors and pretty clothes through the women of their homes, who were dressed to kill. Now they are beginning to want a few gay things for themselves. It all started with baby blue shirts and you know how they reign.

The man wants to tell me a funnier story than the one of the girl who, late at night, dropped a can of condensed milk out of her top story window desginated to fall in front of the beau who was leaving her in anger and attract his attention. It fell on his raccoon coat and his life was saved by the coat, and his romance by his sense of humor. Here's his story:

"Years ago when tandem bicycles were the vogue, a married lady at my boarding house said she'd like to ride a tandem bicycle. I said I would, too, so I got a nice new black shiny one and we went bye-bye.

"The lady had on a silk waist with big sleeves and a long skirt. It was a beautiful evening. The sun was just decending in the west, gilding everything with a mellow golden light and the birds were all singing their good-night songs. The ladies of the boarding house came to the curb to see us start, to help the lady arrange her dress and so forth. We went around the corner all right and were sailing along nicely when she yelled 'stop it, stop it!' I stopped as soon as I could, but her skirts were all wound up around her head before I could manage a landing. In getting off the cay I slipped and we both fell down under the bicycle. There was a startling exhibition of white underclothes—with ruffles on.

"The lady's skirt was caught so tightly in the wheels I had to get a man from the sidewalk to help me unwind her. I am ashamed to say he laughed. I would have laughed if I hadn't ben so sorry for her. She was a nice girl and almost died of shame. When we got extricated I asked her if she wanted to ride back to the boarding house and she said 'No, I'll walk!' If she sees this I'll ask her pardon again. Do you know of anything funnier? If so print it."

Then they tell us women will go back to long hair and long skirts! I'm willnig to bet money that they won't.

But if women wear men's pajamas at night (and they do) and wear mannish clothes in the day time, why are men "saps" and "nitwits" whose "heads never hardened," who want to wear frills.

You tell me.

Crawls Through Head of a Tennis Racquet

New York, March 3. — (U.P.) — King Brawman, 32, a button-hole maker of the Bronx, basked in the rosy glow of fame today. He is the first man, so far as public records reveal, to have crawled through the head of a tennis racquet in the middle of Union Square.

After this remarkable display of agility, Brawman removed his derby hat, formal coat, and pearl-gray spats, lay down on a bed of 1,200 nails, and invited the public to jump on him.

The public did, and this was duly recorded by several movie cameras.

After which Brawman climbed through the keyhole of a large wooden padlock. And when the exhibition was over, he repeated it at the request of the cameramen.

Like the white knight of "Alice in Wonderland," Brawman asserted that it was all "my own invention." He did it at home to amuse the children, he said, and decided to give the public a treat. The public, 1,000 strong, enjoyed it.

OH THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

Copyright 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Whether or not men should wear frills if they want to, and if they should be called names because they do, brings letters daily. Some men actually point back to the days when lace ruffles and satin coats and knee breeches with buckles didn't mean a man could not fight a duel or give an offender a sock in the jaw. They can't see why because times are changed, that should mean that anything more than a style has changed, and why men can't be exceedingly he, and still like buckles at their knees.

To see some of them strut in their plain clothes makes me think that in their secret hearts, a great many men would like strutting in something gay that's worth strutting over.

From Grove Point, Michigan a man writes that it is a good thing that the man from Chicago, who liked slippers and silk hose didn't let that information get out when he was in the army. He says some bitter things about him. He's wrong. Men have been enjoying their love for gay colors and pretty clothes through the women of their homes, who were dressed to kill. Now they are beginning to want a few gay things for themselves. It all started with baby blue shirts and you know how they reign.

The man wants to tell me a funnier story than the one of the girl who, late at night, dropped a can of condensed milk out of her top story window desginated to fall in front of the beau who was leaving her in anger and attract his attention. It fell on his raccoon coat and his life was saved by the coat, and his romance by his sense of humor. Here's his story:

"Years ago when tandem bicycles were the vogue, a married lady at my boarding house said she'd like to ride a tandem bicycle. I said I would, too, so I got a nice new black shiny one and we went bye-bye.

"The lady had on a silk waist with big sleeves and a long skirt. It was a beautiful evening. The sun was just decending in the west, gilding everything with a mellow golden light and the birds were all singing their good-night songs. The ladies of the boarding house came to the curb to see us start, to help the lady arrange her dress and so forth. We went around the corner all right and were sailing along nicely when she yelled 'stop it, stop it!' I stopped as soon as I could, but her skirts were all wound up around her head before I could manage a landing. In getting off the car I slipped and we both fell down under the bicycle. There was a startling exhibition of white underclothes—with ruffles on.

"The lady's skirt was caught so tightly in the wheels I had to get a man from the sidewalk to help me unwind her. I am ashamed to say he laughed. I would have laughed if I hadn't ben so sorry for her. She was a nice girl and almost died of shame. When we got extricated I asked her if she wanted to ride back to the boarding house and she said 'No, I'll walk!' If she sees this I'll ask her pardon again. Do you know of anything funnier? If so print it."

Then they tell us women will go back to long hair and long skirts! I'm willnig to bet money that they won't.

But if women wear men's pajamas at night (and they do) and wear mannish clothes in the day time, why are men "saps" and "nitwits" whose "heads never hardened," who want to wear frills.

You tell me.

BACK HOME AFTER 2½ YEARS IN AFRICA

Bob Peterson Received Dispatch Issues With Enthusiasm in Stay at Muflira

RETURNS WITH LEOPARD SKINS

Insisted Upon Celebration of July 4 Even Though Holidays Not Recognized

Robert Peterson, Brainerd, back in Brainerd after two and a half years in Northern Rhodesia, Africa, kept in touch with his friends and activities of Brainerd and world events by close perusal of the Brainerd Dispatch.

"I would read your newspaper over two and three times. I was always pleased when the mail carried the edition of your newspaper. I could read it and see what my friends back home were doing and I also was informed of world events through it." Mr. Peterson asid.

Being 180 miles away from the nearest town, Mr. Peterson with the exception of two attacks of malaria fever worked every day in the year and had little time for exploration of Africa although he did see leopards at night, screeching baboons, the monstrous hippopotamus and other African animals.

He went to town only once while he worked as a diamond driller for the Longyear Drilling Company of Minneapolis who contracted with the Rhodesia Selection Trust Company to drill for zinc at Muflira, Northern Rhodesia, British territory.

No holidays were observed in the camp where Mr. Peterson was under contract but Mr. Peterson and other Americans insisted upon stopping work the Fourth of July and staging an impromptu celebration which the natives were quite interested in.

Much of Mr. Peterson's idle moments was spent in reading.

"At one time I had as high as 300 books in my rooms and of course I kept the issues of the Brainerd Dispatch. I used to read every line of it," he said.

Mr. Peterson brought back to Brainerd with him two leopard skins which are the envy of his friends here.

Monday he received a Christmas card from a friend back in Africa which was mailed early in November.

His sister, Miss Elizabeth Peterson, Brainerd, Route 5, sent his first Christmas present over to Africa from Brainerd on November 1. It reached Mr. Peterson March 1.

"I received the Brainerd Dispatch two months after publication but that was considered fast time," Mr. Peterson said.

Mr. Peterson said he was mighty pleased to return home but also said he had no regrets in making the lengthy journey. He complained however on the 15 percent income tax charged him and other empoyees while working in Africa, the tax being charged on the basis of his salary and that left in trust for him in Minneapolis.

The trip to Northern Rhodesia was delayed five days at Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia by a railroad strike. From there he reached Mocombo, Belgium Congo, and travelled from there to Muflira where he worked.

Mr. Peterson left Brainerd on January 15, 1929 and set sail from New York travelling by way of England, the Maderia Islands and to Capetown. He remained at Muflira until December 5, 1930 when he returned to the United States by way of the east coast of Africa, Egypt, Italy and Paris.

Diamond drilling was done by Mr. Peterson through 3500 feet striking three veins of zinc. He expressed satisfaction with the weather in Africa and said he was fortunate in being located at a 5,000 feet elevation. In spite of the elevation the temperature at times reached 120 degrees, Mr. Peterson said.

White people are fast opening up Africa for mining interests as shown by the fact that when Mr. Peterson went to Muflira there were only 98 white people residing there while now there are over 1,000 whites.

Dispatch Reader Interest

Robert Peterson

Of Brainerd as he was snapped relaxing in Muflira, Northern Rhodesia, Africa, reading a copy of the Brainerd Dispatch. "I read every copy two and three times," Mr. Peterson said. He is back home after two and a half years diamond drilling for zinc in Africa.

BACK HOME AFTER 2½ YEARS IN AFRICA

Bob Peterson Received Dispatch Issues With Enthusiasm in Stay at Muflira

RETURNS WITH LEOPARD SKINS

Insisted Upon Celebration of July 4 Even Though Holidays Not Recognized

Robert Peterson, Brainerd, back in Brainerd after two and a half years in Northern Rhodesia, Africa, kept in touch with his friends and activities of Brainerd and world events by close perusal of the Brainerd Dispatch.

"I would read your newspaper over two and three times. I was always pleased when the mail carried the edition of your newspaper. I could read it and see what my friends back home were doing and I also was informed of world events through it." Mr. Peterson asid.

Being 180 miles away from the nearest town, Mr. Peterson with the exception of two attacks of malaria fever worked every day in the year and had little time for exploration of Africa although he did see leopards at night, screeching baboons, the monstrous hippopotamus and other African animals.

He went to town only once while he worked as a diamond driller for the Longyear Drilling Company of Minneapolis who contracted with the Rhodesia Selection Trust Company to drill for zinc at Muflira, Northern Rhodesia, British territory.

No holidays were observed in the camp where Mr. Peterson was under contract but Mr. Peterson and other Americans insisted upon stopping work the Fourth of July and staging an impromptu celebration which the natives were quite interested in.

Much of Mr. Peterson's idle moments was spent in reading.

"At one time I had as high as 300 books in my rooms and of course I kept the issues of the Brainerd Dispatch. I used to read every line of it," he said.

Mr. Peterson brought back to Brainerd with him two leopard skins which are the envy of his friends here.

Monday he received a Christmas card from a friend back in Africa which was mailed early in November.

His sister, Miss Elizabeth Peterson, Brainerd, Route 5, sent his first Christmas present over to Africa from Brainerd on November 1. It reached Mr. Peterson March 1.

"I received the Brainerd Dispatch two months after publication but that was considered fast time," Mr. Peterson said.

Mr. Peterson said he was mighty pleased to return home but also said he had no regrets in making the lengthy journey. He complained however on the 15 percent income tax charged him and other empoyees while working in Africa, the tax being charged on the basis of his salary and that left in trust for him in Minneapolis.

The trip to Northern Rhodesia was delayed five days at Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia by a railroad strike. From there he reached Mocombo, Belgium Congo, and travelled from there to Muflira where he worked.

Mr. Peterson left Brainerd on January 15, 1929 and set sail from New York travelling by way of England, the Maderia Islands and to Capetown. He remained at Muflira until December 5, 1930 when he returned to the United States by way of the east coast of Africa, Egypt, Italy and Paris.

Diamond drilling was done by Mr. Peterson through 3500 feet striking three veins of zinc. He expressed satisfaction with the weather in Africa and said he was fortunate in being located at a 5,000 feet elevation. In spite of the elevation the temperature at times reached 120 degrees, Mr. Peterson said.

White people are fast opening up Africa for mining interests as shown by the fact that when Mr. Peterson went to Muflira there were only 98 white people residing there while now there are over 1,000 whites.

At Senate and House Temperance Committee Hearing

THE senate and house temperance committee hearing brought out a large attendance of citizens to discuss the merits and demerits of the eighteenth amendment. The point at issue was a bill proposing submission of the wet and dry question to a vote of the people of the state.

As reported by Lewis C. Mills in the Minneapolis Journal, speakers backing the referendum included Horace G. Whitmore of Minneapolis; Representative John J. McDonough of St. Paul, co-author of the bill; Dr. Helen Hughes Heilscher of Mankato; Albert Junkin of St. Paul; E. G. Hall, Minneapolis, president of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, and Rev. William Bolger, vice president of St. Thomas college.

Against the proposed referendum were these speakers: Dr. John C. Acheson, president of Macalester college of St. Paul; Senator J. S. McCormack, Albert Lea; Gertrude Brown, Minneapolis; Paul M. Casserly, Minneapolis attorney; Paul J. Thompson, Minneapolis attorney; Mrs. Josephine Sizer, St. Paul, president of the Minnesota W. C. T. U., and Rev. Roy L. Smith, pastor of Simpson Methodist church, Minneapolis.

Dr. Smith in opposing repeal of the 18th amendment said that "they say drinking is a personal matter. But when a man drinks and then goes out on the highways in an automobile it is everybody's business. Suppose we do repeal this law, what do you propose to take its place? There isn't a government on the face of the earth which isn't dealing with this problem, and if anyone can find a better solution than we've got I'd like to know about it. This proposal for a referendum is unfair. You ask us to give up something we've got and take an empty sack in return."

Rev. Father Bolger said that "millions and millions of men and women act as if the prohibition law did not exist. Many a man now is a law violator technically who never before had thought of doing anything beyond the law. This law is not enforceable. The passage of the eighteenth amendment was the greatest blunder in the history of self-governing people. It is monstrous to say it cannot be repealed."

Attorney Thompson doubted the legality of a referendum proposal and declared he "thought the legislature has no legal right to pass a law like this since the state does not have the initiative and referendum. The legislature should first get the opinion of the attorney general on this matter before they spend a lot of money doing something that will result in nothing."

Varying Snowfall

THE snowfall of last week seemed general throughout the state, but fell in varying quantities. That fact may be noted in a drive to the Twin Cities. The highway of No. 27 trunk was practically bare and revealed the cement between Brainerd and Barrows. Thereafter the roadway carried heavy caked snow and ice on to Little Falls, with only a few patches of clear highway. From Little Falls to St. Cloud it still carried much packed snow and ice. From St. Cloud to Elk River the highway carried long stretches of center ruts on both sides of the road. From Elk River to Minnapolis the highway was practically clear.

Driving late Friday and Saturday nights called for careful steering and numerous places on the highway showed where cars had skidded into the ditch.

Tribute to a Good Coach

IT was pleasing last Friday night to see a crowd of eager fathers and mothers around Coach William Dammann praising him for the fine record he had made in Brainerd high school basketball and especially for the showing which Brainerd basketeers made against their traditional rivals, the Crosby-Ironton Rangers.

Dammann's direction of basketball in all its phases has been conducted quietly and without friction. He has developed players gradually, so that top form will be in evidence during the tournaments.

He has stirred athletic fervor in all departments, and soon after his being engaged by the Brainerd School Board sought to instill in citizens as much interest in football as the town has always manifested in basketball.

The Tut-Petrolle Fight

NEW YORK has not taken kindly to the King Tut-Petrolle fight and has started an investigation. Everybody from managers to water boys will be questioned by the New York Boxing Commission.

Damon and Pythias were exponents of brotherly love. King Tut and Petrolle, on the other hand, seem to have established a fighting "trust" and have had six fights and the record books show how victory has swung from one side to the other.

To the average citizens so many fights between the same principals should become wearisome, something like the average family quarrel. There must certainly be enough fighting material in this world for Tut and Petrolle to find other opponents, or is the Tut-Petrolle series of engagements to continue on forever like a Kentucky mountain feud.

Brainerd Assured of New Bridge

BRAINERD is assured of a new bridge over the Mississippi on State Highway No. 2. Late Saturday afternoon President Hoover signed the bill introduced by Congressman Harold Knutson, which had quickly passed both houses of Congress.

No information is at present available as to the exact location or type of bridge to be decided upon by the State Highway Department. Of course, Brainerd people are unaimous in a wish that a bridge of the Anoka type may be built, one adequate for traffic for years to come, broad and roomy with two walks for pedestrians.

Aids Dairy Interests

THE Brigham oleo tax bill has passed House and Senate. The vote in the Senate was 68 to 9. It carried the solid support of all Northwest farm senators.

Supporters of the bill claim that it will benefit the dairy industry a million dollars a day.

As one fan stated after seeing the exciting Crosby-Ironton vs. Brainerd game Friday night, "Two such games a week is all my enfeebled system will stand."

C.-I. QUINT LOSES TO WARRIORS FOR FIRST TIME IN TWO YEARS

FASTEST GAME OF THE SEASON DRAWS CROWD OF ENTHUSIASTIC FANS

Playing before a large audience and displaying a brilliant brand of basketball, the Warriors defeated the Crosby-Ironton team by the score of 25-18.

The Warriors deserve great credit for their showing last Friday night. Meeting a Crosby-Ironton team composed of four members of last year's tournament team, the Warriors not only stemmed the tide of the fast C.-I. offense but came back with such a powerful onslaught that C.-I. fell to defeat.

The Warriors snatched the lead from C.-I. early in the conflict and stuck to it during the remainder of the game. Every member on the team played the type of basketball that spelled victory. Fast breaking, nice defensive work on the part of both teams were the essentials that made the game teem with interest.

Every one of the multitude of enthusiastic Brainerd fans that filled the gym to capacity left the scene of battle well satisfied that they received their money's worth.

The game with Little Falls is the only game remaining to be played, before the Warriors begin their preparation for the tournament.

Referee Piper of Minnesota handled the whistle very fairly and held the boys to a fast clean game.

Bob Wygle, Warrior forward, was high point man for Brainerd.

The line-ups were:

Brainerd—B. Wygle, f; Foster, f; G. Wygle, c; Marshall, g; Schuety, g; White, g.

Crosby-Ironton—Petraborg, Zauhar, Perpich, Dobravich, Olson, Kosonen, Keeler.

In the preliminaries the Freshmen

beat the reserves by a 22-16 score. The men seeing action were:

Freshmen—Molstad, Sherlund, Heikkinen, Tollefson and Gallagher.

Reserves—Swanson, Anderson, Garvey, Dahl, Koeck and Koering.

Tumbling experts under the tutelage of Mr. Squire gave an exhibition during the half, much to the amusement of all the spectators.

TO KNOW HER IS TO LOVE HER

It seems that ambition is generally considered the ruling motive in Lady Macbeth's character and that all her principles and every feminine feeling is dominated by it. True that she was ambitious, but mostly for her husband. Nowhere does she speak of a great desire to become queen. But if ambition ruled her why did she fear that some other emotion might cry "hold?" She did fear her womanly emotions, else she would not have called to the spirits to unsex her, and to fill her from the crown to the toe top full of direst cruelty.

Ambition did rule her long enough for her to carry out all the acts preparatory to the murder but at the critical moment love for her father cried "Hold." Had he not resembled her father as he slept, she had done it. After all her effort, Duncan was still alive and it was Macbeth who really did the deed.

Her love for husband prompted her to help him. To her this meant supplying the qualities that he lacked which were necessary to execute his plans. Was she very wicked, when all she did was to try to supply the firmness and determination which he needed? She really lacked these qualities herself, yet she made such a brave attempt that Macbeth was shamed into standing by her when she failed. And after all, it was she who had originated this deed.

In the last act she is mourning because, "the Thane of Fife had a wife but where is she now?" And so we find that she has sympathy for one of her own sex.

Love for Macbeth drove her onward in spite of reason; love for her father held her back in spite of ambition. Was not love, then, her strongest characteristic?

We might ask, why couldn't she see that no good could come of such evil? But why couldn't she have seen that? Ladies of her time did not criticize their husband's wishes. He had decided what he wanted but as she said, lacked the unscrupulousness to get what he wanted in such a way.

How could Lady Macbeth have been "naturally cruel," "invariably wicked" and "a demon of firmness?" If she had been naturally cruel she had not needed to call upon the spirits to unsex her, and Macbeth was not a man who could have loved a cruel woman. On the contrary, he loved her for her kindness which manifests itself most strongly in the tenderness with which she soothes him. He needs this and relies upon her for it. it is not her cruelty but her energy and strength that he admired when he told her to bring forth males only. If she had been invariably savage her love could not have soothed him, nor would her uplifted dagger have stopped because her victim reminded her of her father. If she were a demon of firmness she would not have weakened at the critical moment nor could not have died of remorse and despair.

To know her is to realize her power of loving; to realize this is to love her.

—Florence Roberts, Eng. IV

DR. SMITH TALKS TO H. S. STUDENT BODY

EXAMINATIONS, AS THE WORLD GIVES THEM, USED AS THEME OF ADDRESS

Dr. Roy L. Smith of the Simpson Methodist church of Minneapolis visited Brainerd High School last Tuesday and gave a very edifying and inspiring talk. Dr. Smith is a minister, journalist, traveler and author. He is the Fireside Philosopher of WCCO.

He was introduced to the student body by Ira Peterson, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. In his address Dr. Smith used examinations as his main theme. He said that in school we have another chance to make our grade if we fail. When we get out into the world we have examinations every day but with the world as our examining board we don't get another opportunity to redeem ourselves. He proposes that there be a change in the educational system. As it is now, the bright people, teachers, ask questions of the dumb ones, students. His logical suggestion is to reverse the situation. He pointed out the advantages of the American educational system. In his travels he has visited the famous colleges of the world and has found a different situation in the foreign system of education. For instance in Ireland, only the wealthy or titled are privileged to go to college. It is unthought of to work one's way through school. The Amercian youth has the doors of education opened to him. There are no society restrictions.

After listening to this very instructive talk touched with humorous illustrations and delivered in an interesting manner, the students felt inspired to the highest degree. They are very grateful to Dr. Smith for this great address which they feel will be a great aid to them after the school doors have closed behind them.

SENIORS ANXIOUSLY AWAIT VOTE FOR N. H. S.

Since only 15 per cent out of 43 eligible members of the Senior class may be chosen to become a part of the National Honorary Society, those appointed members will consider it a great honor. Students are judged for character, scholarship, leadership and service. These four qualities are graded in groups A, B, and C—those having the highest grades win membership into the society. In this judging and selecting, the faculty plays a large part. Final results of the faculty's decisions will be published next week.

Sidelights on the Game

It seemed as though C.-I. didn't have any pep in them Friday night. What's the matter?

Throughout the whole game there was only one substitution. Pretty good, eh what?

There wasn't any standing room left for the people who came late. One person climbed on top of the bars that were provided for the girl's gym.

The Pep Band played better than ever Friday on account of the unusual amount of school spirit prevailing.

* * *

So far, Brainerd hasn't lost a game on its home floor. Hope the record stays that way.

* * *

The loud speaker from Rosko Bros. was a decided improvement over the last one that was installed.

PAT'S PATTER

Shouting to the Housetops

Never was I so absolutely "done" as I was last Wednesday night. Stuart Patterson was quite shaky too, although his grin belied the fact. But Bernice—she was so nervous that I'll wager she hasn't a tooth that isn't loose from her chattering (shivering) jaws.

We were scheduled to start at 5:30 and I waited outside till after 6 and caught the sniffles. Bernice had to do a million little errands downtown and thus had no supper. Miss Oertag was so worried over the time on our declamations that she forgot the glycerine tablets. The roads were terrible, and by the time we hailed Crosby we were worn out cushioning bumps. At a drug store there wasn't a cooling tablet to be had and we had to take cough drops and hoarhound which is noted for its burning throat stimulation. Before the evening ended, everyone of us was chewing cotton (seemingly) because of the dryness of nervousness.

At the last minute, three or four paragraphs had to be cut out of Bernice's piece for time salvation. We tried our voices in the assembly and they echoed so heartily they went back on us.

Stuart was allowed to sit and enjoy a little deferring conversation but Bernice and I were shown in a room to "rest" and think how hungry and scared we were.

At last the show was on. It ran quite smoothly till I tried to show Crosby they needed a new platform rug and accidentally kicked the whole thing out from under me. I fell so hard I sprained my little toe and they laughed and thought it was clever. If they only knew the half of it.

I guess the audience was about as surprised as we were when the decisions favored two of us. Too excited to think of it at the time we became so hungry on the homeward journey that we finished the cough-drops and chewed the rag for diversion.

In Brainerd, though, we each put away the largest chicken sandwich I ever saw to celebrate and then went to bed still wondering if there wasn't some mistake.

We had a large delegation from Brainerd: Mr. and Mrs. Cobb, Miss Tornstrom, Mrs. Hagberg, Mrs. Amos Maghan and Mrs. Weir, Miss Clausen, and some of the other local contestants: Irja Hautala, Elaine Cook, Lucile Gondron and Genevieve Peters. Mrs. Steinfeldt took the declaimers down and Mrs. Koop accompanied her.

EXCHANGE

Glancing over our exchanges we notice that many of the schools are putting on operettas about the same time as we.

One of our new exchanges, The Static," published by the Moose Lake high school students, is advertising its operetta, "Purple Towers." It is being coached by a Brainerd high alumnus of '23, Alice G. Johnson. We hope that the public performance will meet with success. We are very glad to add the Moose Lake paper to our exchange list and hope that it will be a regular exchange for us.

We read that: The ladder of life is full of splinters, but they always prick the hardest when we're sliding down.

—William L. Brownell.

CURTAIN!

Did you ever hear of an Aunt Airelale Well that's what George Irvine insists on calling his poor Aunt Adelaide in "The Road to Yesterday." There are lots of foolish little innuendoes that make play-practice very amusing but they couldn't compare with the side-splitting comedy of the play itself.

Just for fun, I'm going to tell you a few of these little sideshows. Miss Tornstrom is coaching the cast and is deeply concerned in the way it unfolds itself. For instance, she was trying very hard to make George erase his blank grin and act, so she said, "Goodness, George, Helen is going to throw her arms around you and naturally you're dumfounded!" Then Helen Sheets got all muddled and tells Alice Nolan, "Oh you did get killed. I'm so glad!" Brute! Then Miss Tornstrom noticed Jim Gorvey standing lost in reverie and she says, "Haven't you died yet Hurry up!" Really, there come times when a little sarcasm is necessary, or facetiousness rather, when a family is involved. Pat was thoroughly squelched when George said,"My, the static is hard to overcome tonight."

Did you know that we are practicing at homes and in every one there's a special seat for our audience, Miss Tornstrom. In other words—no one, as someone said, sits in that seat; that's hers alone.

Among the many arguments is the latest on how one should stab. Does one plunge or jab, and how? Again, in the year 1603, did they really drink no water?

Can you imagine all the mistakes and "boners" a very modern girl would pull in the year 1603? Well, all the humor imaginable is stacked up in this facinating, half-modern, half-medieval, farce comedy. Don't miss it!

LOCAL GIRLS WIN LAURELS IN SUB-DISTRICT DECLAM CONTEST AT C.-I.

Hearty Pep Fest Held Prior to C.-I. Game

With the pep band in full force, cheer leaders in perfect form, and the student body all keyed up for the forthcoming battle with the C.-I. quint, a pep fest was held, Friday with two added treats in the guise of the players and our own Hallet Clarkson whose loneliness had driven him to visiting school and his classmates.

When called upon by "Ski," Hallet, the well-known cheer-leader, responded with a few well-chosen, modest words expressing his appreciation of the students' recognition. Called upon amidst a storm of applause, he likewise sat down amidst a great applause.

After a few lusty yells and songs, with the aid of the Pep band, and much persuasion, the various members of the B.H.S. team made their appearances. Many, called upon for speeches, submitted their expectations for the evening game and with a hearty cheer for the fulfillment of their hopes, the pep fest drew to a close. To a militaristic tune of Mr. Ford's Pep band the students left the assembly with their hopes high and hearts light.

Y CLUBS ENTERTAIN DR. ROY L. SMITH

TRI-HI, HI-Y SERVE DINNER FOR THE RENOWNED RADIO SPEAKER

"Highways are Happy Ways" was the theme of Dr. Roy L. Smith's talk given at the joint supper of the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi last Tuesday night. His text was taken from a combination of a passage from "Jeremiah" and a Standard Oil sign-board advertisement. His text covered four points which were: 1. high thinking; 2. high character; 3. high ideals; and 4. high endeavor.

Preceding the talk a delightful supper consisting of escalloped potatoes, meat loaf, rolls, olives and graham crackers with date filling and whipped cream was enjoyed. John Linn, Robert Hanson and Joe Marchel from the Hi-Y, and Mae McQuillan, Dorothy Opsahl and Jean Lucas from the Tri-Hi prepared the meal.

Students Learn Fine Points of Needlework

Practical knowledge is being gained by the girls in Miss Filk's sewing classes by both the beginners and the advanced group, as articles attractive and useful are being done either by hand or machine. The fourth period class, which is composed of those who have studied sewing the last semester of last year and the first semester this year, are doing decorative needlework. Their first project this semester was a sampler with an original design. To illustrate Italian hemstitching linen guest towels, card table covers, and luncheon sets were made. The results were very beautiful and well worthy of the owner's pride. They are now finishing a personal project, which includes purses, hats, collar-and-cuff sets, and any object for one's self. Next week they will begin work on pillows, foot-stool covers, hooked rugs, or any article which would add to the beauty of a living room.

The beginning students took cooking the first of the year, and began their work in sewing at the second semester. Many of them had never attempted to sew before, but through good coaching on the instructor's part and diligent effort on the student's part, very beautiful results have been obtained. Pajamas, both beach and otherwise, and dainty lingerie have been completed by the students, and are very neatly done. Next week the girls are going to start dresses.

EIGHTH GRADE NOTES

The A classes need not think that they have a monopoly on the good History students. In checking over the result of the last contest we find that the B class has a very creditable record. They must use a good grade of gasoline in their planes. The winning plane in the A class is again piloted by Lawrence Holman while Robbert Patterson leads for the B's. Robbert also has the honor of having a perfect score on a 116 points history test.

Six weeks seems a very short time, at least it does when we think of examinations. We no more than get settled down comfortably than examinations week is here again. To some, of course, it means honor and publicity but to others it means just another E. If I were superintendent of schools I should most certainly do away with the exams—but then according to Dr. Smith life is one "examination" after another so we might as well get used to it.

BERNICE STEINFELDT, DRAMATICS, "PAT" IRVINE, HUMOROUS, WIN FIRST PLACES

Again the honors were carried back from Crosby with the Humorous and Dramatic contestants taking first places over their Crosby and Aitkin opponents.

It is interesting to note the various titles of the selections given by the contestants which were all very well given with much poise.

In Dramatics, Crosby's entry gave "Elizabeth" and the Aitkin entry gave "Daddy Doc." The evening selection was "Humoresque," by Bernice Steinfeldt.

In the humorous group, "The Belle of Carrotville," was entertainingly portrayed by the Aitkin contestant and "Station B-U-N-K" by the girl from Crosby. In this division, Elizabeth Irvine won with "Brotherly Love" as her selection.

"The Wandering Jew" and "Something Lost" were given, respectively, by the Aitkin and Brainerd orators. As in other years the Crosby entrant won with an appealing piece concerning war and its tragedies.

Now the Brainerd contestants are busy with the preparation for the District Contest which is to be held on Thursday, as Staples with the following towns entered:

Little Falls—one contestant.
Crosby-Ironton—one contestant.
Wadena—three contestants.
Brainerd—two contestants.
Staples—two contestants.

Boys Given Physical Exams by City Doctors

With a sound body comes a good mind. If either one of these are lacking in any B. H. S. boys the cause will soon be reached, at least from a physical standpoint, for all boys are being given a very thorough physical examination through the courtesy of the Brainerd doctors.

The physical exams cover the whole physical system—eyes, blood, heart, lungs, and all other minute parts of the human organisms. The Manitoux tests for T. B. have been given to those whose parents permit.

Besides doctors' examination an average has been established for boys of various weights to prove their physical abilities by rope climbing, throwing, running, pushing up, chinning the bar, and many other athletic tests. As a result the students shall be better developed bodily as well as mentally.

Senior's Philosophy

Small courtesies, small kindnesses, small considerations habitually practiced in our school life give greater charm to the character of our classmen than the display of great talents and other accomplishments.

Canine Expressions

The dog was probably the first animal tamed by the primeval man, and the dog still ranks as the most popular pet and animal companion of man. Through countless generations of close association there has grown a tie of understanding and friendship between man and dog that links a true dog lover and a faithful intelligent dog. Through years of close companionship with man, dogs have gradually attained a few human qualities and even human expressions. Look carefully at the dogs you meet and you will see optimistic dogs, pessimistic dogs, sad dogs, happy dogs, friendly dogs, and unfriendly dogs and even a few representatives of the criminal class of dogs that all self respecting canines shun. You can go into any dog pound in a large city and see any number of dogs, all with expressive countenances.. Big dogs, little dogs, young dogs, old dogs, mongrels and thoroughbreds, all have expressions almost human and each one characteristically different from the rest. You will see hopeful expressions, discouraged expressions, and bored expressions and sometimes a dog with an ugly expression and a mean disposition. Dogs wishing to make a good impression assume a dignified and intelligent look. Old dogs are cooly aloof and young dogs are roughishly inquiring. Dogs with a pedigree and a superiority complex are haughtily disdainful and resent all advances from mere human beings. Watch-dogs and one-man-dogs while on duty wear their routine expressions which is an angry menacing scowl. It is my opinion a dog has a conscience and when caught doing something which he knows is wrong any well trained dog will instantly look sheepish and ashamed.

Personally I have had a splendid opportunity for studying canine expressions. I have owned over 25 dogs at various times and am continually bringing home strays which I do not include in the enumeration. Some of my canine companions have been thoroughbreds: a few have had pedigrees and papers, but most of them have been just dogs.

TUESDAY, MARCH 3, 1931

At Senate and House Temperance Committee Hearing

THE senate and house temperance committee hearing brought out a large attendance of citizens to discuss the merits and demerits of the eighteenth amendment. The point at issue was a bill proposing submission of the wet and dry question to a vote of the people of the state.

As reported by Lewis C. Mills in the Minneapolis Journal, speakers backing the referendum included Horace G. Whitmore of Minneapolis; Representative John J. McDonough of St. Paul, co-author of the bill; Dr. Helen Hughes Heilscher of Mankato; Albert Junkin of St. Paul; E. G. Hall, Minneapolis, president of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, and Rev. William Bolger, vice president of St. Thomas college.

Against the proposed referendum were these speakers: Dr. John C. Acheson, president of Macalester college of St. Paul; Senator J. S. McCormack, Albert Lea; Gertrude Brown, Minneapolis; Paul M. Casserly, Minneapolis attorney; Paul J. Thompson, Minneapolis attorney; Mrs. Josephine Sizer, St. Paul, president of the Minnesota W. C. T. U., and Rev. Roy L. Smith, pastor of Simpson Methodist church, Minneapolis.

Dr. Smith in opposing repeal of the 18th amendment said that "they say drinking is a personal matter. But when a man drinks and then goes out on the highways in an automobile it is everybody's business. Suppose we do repeal this law, what do you propose to take its place? There isn't a government on the face of the earth which isn't dealing with this problem, and if anyone can find a better solution than we've got I'd like to know about it. This proposal for a referendum is unfair. You ask us to give up something we've got and take an empty sack in return."

Rev. Father Bolger said that "millions and millions of men and women act as if the prohibition law did not exist. Many a man now is a law violator technically who never before had thought of doing anything beyond the law. This law is not enforceable. The passage of the eighteenth amendment was the greatest blunder in the history of self-governing people. It is monstrous to say it cannot be repealed."

Attorney Thompson doubted the legality of a referendum proposal and declared he "thought the legislature has no legal right to pass a law like this since the state does not have the initiative and referendum. The legislature should first get the opinion of the attorney general on this matter before they spend a lot of money doing something that will result in nothing."

Varying Snowfall

THE snowfall of last week seemed general throughout the state, but fell in varying quantities. That fact may be noted in a drive to the Twin Cities. The highway of No. 27 trunk was practically bare and revealed the cement between Brainerd and Barrows. Thereafter the roadway carried heavy caked snow and ice on to Little Falls, with only a few patches of clear highway. From Little Falls to St. Cloud it still carried much packed snow and ice. From St. Cloud to Elk River the highway carried long stretches of center ruts on both sides of the road. From Elk River to Minnapolis the highway was practically clear.

Driving late Friday and Saturday nights called for careful steering and numerous places on the highway showed where cars had skidded into the ditch.

Tribute to a Good Coach

IT was pleasing last Friday night to see a crowd of eager fathers and mothers around Coach William Dammann praising him for the fine record he had made in Brainerd high school basketball and especially for the showing which Brainerd basketeers made against their traditional rivals, the Crosby-Ironton Rangers.

Dammann's direction of basketball in all its phases has been conducted quietly and without friction. He has developed players gradually, so that top form will be in evidence during the tournaments.

He has stirred athletic fervor in all departments, and soon after his being engaged by the Brainerd School Board sought to instill in citizens as much interest in football as the town has always manifested in basketball.

The Tut-Petrolle Fight

NEW YORK has not taken kindly to the King Tut-Petrolle fight and has started an investigation. Everybody from managers to water boys will be questioned by the New York Boxing Commission.

Damon and Pythias were exponents of brotherly love. King Tut and Petrolle, on the other hand, seem to have established a fighting "trust" and have had six fights and the record books show how victory has swung from one side to the other.

To the average citizens so many fights between the same principals should become wearisome, something like the average family quarrel. There must certainly be enough fighting material in this world for Tut and Petrolle to find other opponents, or is the Tut-Petrolle series of engagements to continue on forever like a Kentucky mountain feud.

Brainerd Assured of New Bridge

BRAINERD is assured of a new bridge over the Mississippi on State Highway No. 2. Late Saturday afternoon President Hoover signed the bill introduced by Congressman Harold Knutson, which had quickly passed both houses of Congress.

No information is at present available as to the exact location or type of bridge to be decided upon by the State Highway Department. Of course, Brainerd people are unaimous in a wish that a bridge of the Anoka type may be built, one adequate for traffic for years to come, broad and roomy with two walks for pedestrians.

Aids Dairy Interests

THE Brigham oleo tax bill has passed House and Senate. The vote in the Senate was 68 to 9. It carried the solid support of all Northwest farm senators.

Supporters of the bill claim that it will benefit the dairy industry a million dollars a day.

As one fan stated after seeing the exciting Crosby-Ironton vs. Brainerd game Friday night, "Two such games a week is all my enfeebled system will stand."

C.-I. QUINT LOSES TO WARRIORS FOR FIRST TIME IN TWO YEARS

FASTEST GAME OF THE SEASON DRAWS CROWD OF ENTHUSIASTIC FANS

Playing before a large audience and displaying a brilliant brand of basketball, the Warriors defeated the Crosby-Ironton team by the score of 25-18.

The Warriors deserve great credit for their showing last Friday night. Meeting a Crosby-Ironton team composed of four members of last year's tournament team, the Warriors not only stemmed the tide of the fast C.-I. offense but came back with such a powerful onslaught that C.-I. fell to defeat.

The Warriors snatched the lead from C.-I. early in the conflict and stuck to it during the remainder of the game. Every member on the team played the type of basketball that spelled victory. Fast breaking, nice defensive work on the part of both teams were the essentials that made the game teem with interest.

Every one of the multitude of enthusiastic Brainerd fans that filled the gym to capacity left the scene of battle well satisfied that they received their money's worth.

The game with Little Falls is the only game remaining to be played, before the Warriors begin their preparation for the tournament.

Referee Piper of Minnesota handled the whistle very fairly and held the boys to a fast clean game.

Bob Wygle, Warrior forward, was high point man for Brainerd.

The line-ups were:

Brainerd—B. Wygle, f; Foster, f; G. Wygle, c; Marshall, g; Schuety, g; White, g.

Crosby-Ironton—Petraborg, Zauhar, Perpich, Dobravich, Olson, Kosonen, Keeler.

In the preliminaries the Freshmen

beat the reserves by a 22-16 score. The men seeing action were:

Freshmen—Molstad, Sherlund, Heikkinen, Tollefson and Gallagher.

Reserves—Swanson, Anderson, Garvey, Dahl, Koeck and Koering.

Tumbling experts under the tutelage of Mr. Squire gave an exhibition during the half, much to the amusement of all the spectators.

TO KNOW HER IS TO LOVE HER

It seems that ambition is generally considered the ruling motive in Lady Macbeth's character and that all her principles and every feminine feeling is dominated by it. True that she was ambitious, but mostly for her husband. Nowhere does she speak of a great desire to become queen. But if ambition ruled her why did she fear that some other emotion might cry "hold?" She did fear her womanly emotions, else she would not have called to the spirits to unsex her, and to fill her from the crown to the toe top full of direst cruelty.

Ambition did rule her long enough for her to carry out all the acts preparatory to the murder but at the critical moment love for her father cried "Hold." Had he not resembled her father as he slept, she had done it. After all her effort, Duncan was still alive and it was Macbeth who really did the deed.

Her love for husband prompted her to help him. To her this meant supplying the qualities that he lacked which were necessary to execute his plans. Was she very wicked, when all she did was to try to supply the firmness and determination which he needed? She really lacked these qualities herself, yet she made such a brave attempt that Macbeth was shamed into standing by her when she failed. And after all, it was she who had originated this deed.

In the last act she is mourning because, "the Thane of Fife had a wife but where is she now?" And so we find that she has sympathy for one of her own sex.

Love for Macbeth drove her onward in spite of reason; love for her father held her back in spite of ambition. Was not love, then, her strongest characteristic?

We might ask, why couldn't she see that no good could come of such evil? But why couldn't she have seen that? Ladies of her time did not criticize their husband's wishes. He had decided what he wanted but as she said, lacked the unscrupulousness to get what he wanted in such a way.

How could Lady Macbeth have been "naturally cruel," "invariably wicked" and "a demon of firmness?" If she had been naturally cruel she had not needed to call upon the spirits to unsex her, and Macbeth was not a man who could have loved a cruel woman. On the contrary, he loved her for her kindness which manifests itself most strongly in the tenderness with which she soothes him. He needs this and relies upon her for it. It is not her cruelty but her energy and strength that he admired when he told her to bring forth males only. If she had been invariably savage her love could not have soothed him, nor would her uplifted dagger have stopped because her victim reminded her of her father. If she were a demon of firmness she would not have weakened at the critical moment nor could not have died of remorse and despair.

To know her is to realize her power of loving; to realize this is to love her.

DR. SMITH TALKS TO H. S. STUDENT BODY

EXAMINATIONS, AS THE WORLD GIVES THEM, USED AS THEME OF ADDRESS

Dr. Roy L. Smith of the Simpson Methodist church of Minneapolis visited Brainerd High School last Tuesday and gave a very edifying and inspiring talk. Dr. Smith is a minister, journalist, traveler and author. He is the Fireside Philosopher of WCCO.

He was introduced to the student body by Ira Peterson, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. In his address Dr. Smith used examinations as his main theme. He said that in school we have another chance to make our grade if we fail. When we get out into the world we have examinations every day but with the world as our examining board we don't get another opportunity to redeem ourselves. He proposes that there be a change in the educational system. As it is now, the bright people, teachers, ask questions of the dumb ones, students. His logical suggestion is to reverse the situation. He pointed out the advantages of the American educational system. In his travels he has visited the famous colleges of the world and has found a different situation in the foreign system of education. For instance in Ireland, only the wealthy or titled are privileged to go to college. It is unthought of to work one's way through school. The Amercian youth has the doors of education opened to him. There are no society restrictions.

After listening to this very instructive talk touched with humorous illustrations and delivered in an interesting manner, the students felt inspired to the highest degree. They are very grateful to Dr. Smith for this great address which they feel will be a great aid to them after the school doors have closed behind them.

SENIORS ANXIOUSLY AWAIT VOTE FOR N. H. S.

Since only 15 per cent out of 43 eligible members of the Senior class may be chosen to become a part of the National Honorary Society, those appointed members will consider it a great honor. Students are judged for character, scholarship, leadership and service. These four qualities are graded in groups A, B, and C—those having the highest grades win membership into the society. In this judging and selecting, the faculty plays a large part. Final results of the faculty's decisions will be published next week.

Sidelights on the Game

It seemed as though C.-I. didn't have any pep in them Friday night. What's the matter?

* * *

Throughout the whole game there was only one substitution. Pretty good, eh what?

* * *

There wasn't any standing room left for the people who came late. One person climbed on top of the bars that were provided for the girl's gym.

* * *

The Pep Band played better than ever Friday on account of the unusual amount of school spirit prevailing.

* * *

So far, Brainerd hasn't lost a game on its home floor. Hope the record stays that way.

* * *

The loud speaker from Rosko Bros. was a decided improvement over the last one that was installed.

PAT'S PATTER

Shouting to the Housetops

Never was I so absolutely "done" as I was last Wednesday night. Stuart Patterson was quite shaky too, although his grin belied the fact. But Bernice—she was so nervous that I'll wager she hasn't a tooth that isn't loose from her chattering (shivering) jaws.

We were scheduled to start at 5:30 and I waited outside till after 6 and caught the sniffles. Bernice had to do a million little errands downtown and thus had no supper. Miss Oertag was so worried over the time on our declamations that she forgot the glycerine tablets. The roads were terrible, and by the time we hailed Crosby we were worn out cushioning bumps. At a drug store there wasn't a cooling tablet to be had and we had to take cough drops and hoarhound which is noted for its burning throat stimulation. Before the evening ended, everyone of us was chewing cotton (seemingly) because of the dryness of nervousness.

At the last minute, three or four paragraphs had to be cut out of Bernice's piece for time salvation. We tried our voices in the assembly and they echoed so heartily they went back on us.

Stuart was allowed to sit and enjoy a little deferring conversation but Bernice and I were shown in a room to "rest" and think how hungry and scared we were.

At last the show was on. It ran quite smoothly till I tried to show Crosby they needed a new platform rug and accidentally kicked the whole thing out from under me. I fell so hard I sprained my little toe and they laughed and thought it was clever. If they only knew the half of it.

I guess the audience was about as surprised as we were when the decisions favored two of us. Too excited to think of it at the time we became so hungry on the homeward journey that we finished the cough-drops and chewed the rag for diversion.

In Brainerd, though, we each put away the largest chicken sandwich I ever saw to celebrate and then went to bed still wondering if there wasn't some mistake.

We had a large delegation from Brainerd: Mr. and Mrs. Cobb, Miss Tornstrom, Mrs. Hagberg, Mrs. Amos Maghan and Mrs. Weir, Miss Clausen, and some of the other local contestants: Irja Hautala, Elaine Cook, Lucile Gendron and Genevieve Peters. Mrs. Steinfeldt took the declaimers down and Mrs. Koop accompanied her.

EXCHANGE

Glancing over our exchanges we notice that many of the schools are putting on operettas about the same time as we.

One of our new exchanges, The Static," published by the Moose Lake high school students, is advertising its operetta, "Purple Towers." It is being coached by a Brainerd high alumnus of '23, Alice G. Johnson. We hope that the public performance will meet with success. We are very glad to add the Moose Lake paper to our exchange list and hope that it will be a regular exchange for us.

We read that: The ladder of life is full of splinters, but they always prick the hardest when we're sliding down.

Y CLUBS ENTERTAIN DR. ROY L. SMITH

TRI-HI, HI-Y SERVE DINNER FOR THE RENOWNED RADIO SPEAKER

"Highways are Happy Ways" was the theme of Dr. Roy L. Smith's talk given at the joint supper of the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi last Tuesday night. His text was taken from a combination of a passage from "Jeremiah" and a Standard Oil sign-board advertisement. Six weeks seems a very short time, at least it does when we think of examinations. We no more than get settled down comfortably than examinations week is here again. To some, of course, it means honor and publicity but to others it means just another E. If I were superintendent of schools I should most certainly do away with the exams—but then according to Dr. Smith life is one "examination" after another so we might as well get used to it.

Boys Given Physical Exams by City Doctors

With a sound body comes a good mind. If either one of these are lacking in any B. H. S. boys the cause will soon be reached, at least from a physical standpoint, for all boys are being given a very thorough physical examination through the courtesy of the Brainerd doctors.

The physical exams cover the whole physical system—eyes, blood, heart, lungs, and all other minute parts of the human organisms. The Manitoux tests for T. B. have been given to those whose parents permit.

Besides doctors' examination an average has been established for boys of various weights to prove their physical abilities by rope climbing, throwing, running, pushing up, chinning the bar, and many other athletic tests. As a result the students shall be better developed bodily as well as mentally.

Senior's Philosophy

Small courtesies, small kindnesses, small considerations habitually practiced in our school life give greater charm to the character of our classmen than the display of great talents and other accomplishments.

Canine Expressions

The dog was probably the first animal tamed by the primeval man, and the dog still ranks as the most popular pet and animal companion of man. Through countless generations of close association there has grown a tie of understanding and friendship between man and dog that links a true dog lover and a faithful intelligent dog. Through years of close companionship with man, dogs have gradually attained a few human qualities and even human expressions. Look carefully at the dogs you meet and you will see optimistic dogs, pessimistic dogs, sad dogs, happy dogs, friendly dogs, and unfriendly dogs and even a few representatives of the criminal class of dogs that all self respecting canines shun. You can go into any dog pound in a large city and see any number of dogs, all with expressive countenances.. Big dogs, little dogs, young dogs, old dogs, mongrels and thoroughbreds, all have expressions almost human and each one characteristically different from the rest. You will see hopeful expressions, discouraged expressions, and bored expressions and sometimes a dog with an ugly expression and a mean disposition. Dogs wishing to make a good impression assume a dignified and intelligent look. Old dogs are cooly aloof and young dogs are roughishly inquiring. Dogs with a pedigree and a superiority complex are haughtily disdainful and resent all advances from mere human beings. Watch-dogs and one-man-dogs while on duty wear their routine expressions which is an angry menacing scowl. It is my opinion a dog has a conscience and when caught doing something which he knows is wrong any well trained dog will instantly look sheepish and ashamed.

Personally I have had a splendid opportunity for studying canine expressions. I have owned over 25 dogs at various times and am continually bringing home strays which I do not include in the enumeration. Some of my canine companions have been thoroughbreds; a few have had pedigrees and papers, but most of them have been just dogs.

The other was the contest by former Sen. George A. Turnham against Sen. A. L. Miller, elected in rural Hennepin county.

The vote to deny the petitions was unanimous in both cases.

PETROLLE AND KING TUT BEFORE BOXING COMMISSION

TO PROVE THEIR FIGHT ON FRIDAY WAS SQUARE ONE

EVERYONE CONNECTED WITH THE SCRAP SUMMONED TO APPEAR

LONG FINGER OF SUSPICION POINTED AT FIGHT FOR SEVERAL REASONS

New York, March 3—(U.P.)—The boxing commission deferred action on the Tut-Petrolle case today.

By HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, March 3.—(U.P.)—Billy Petrolle, the "Fargo Express," from Duluth, Minn., and King Tut of Minneapolis, were to appear before the New York boxing commission today in an effort to prove their fight in Madison Square Garden last Friday night was strictly on the up and up.

Everyone connected with the scrap, from the principals and Matchmaker Tom McArdle of the Garden to the waterboys, has been summoned to the commission's meeting. All will be given an opportunity to express their views of the bout which ended in a fourth round knockout by Petrolle and sent the customers into the night wild with excitement.

The long finger of suspicion is pointed at the fight for several reasons, but principally because of the sudden and last minute shift in the betting odds. As the preliminaries started Tut was being quoted as even money and 6 to 5. By the time the two principals climbed through the ropes Petrolle had been installed as an 8 to 5 favorite.

Thiss udden change of heart by the boys who lay it on the line was interpreted by many to mean that Petrolle, despite his 34-second knockout at the hands of the King less than two weeks before, was certain to win.

Sudden shifts in the betting odds is not new to New York fight circles, however. On the afternoon of the night Jimmy McLarnin met Al Singer, then lightweight champion of the world, the heavier McLarnin was the choice at 5 to 2 or 3 and 1. When the bell rang for the first round Singer was a 9 to 5 favorite. Singer's sudden ascension to the favorite's post gave birth to all sorts of reports that the fight was "in the bag" for the lightweight champion. The reports died away when Singer hit the mat for good in the third round.

Belief that there might be something phony about Tut's knockout was strengthened by the Minnesota boxing commission and the National Boxing Association. Both bodies suspended the fighters, their managers and all fighters belonging to the same stables.

To most of the customers and boxing writers who viewed the fight it looked like the real thing. The action was whirlwind all the way.

DAMMANN TAKES NO CHANCES ON INJURIES TONIGHT

When Londos Saved Crown

SECOND STRINGERS WILL BATTLE FALLS AS RELIEF QUINTET

INJURY AT THIS TIME TO ANY OF FIRST FIVE WOULD HANDICAP SQUAD

WILL ALSO PREVENT FALLS IN BUILDING UP DEFENSE AGAINST TEAM

Coach Bill Dammann will take no chances on injuries to his first string team so close to the tournament and will send his second stringers against the Little Falls team in the last game of the season tonight. The game will be played at the Little Falls high school at 8:15 o'clock with a preliminary game between the juniors of the Falls and Brainerd at 7:15 P. M.

Mr. Dammann is wise in this move because, barring injuries, Little Falls would be only too willing to meet the first five, thus building up a new defense and offense against the team that is doped to spoil their chances in tournament.

Brainerd previously administered a severe defeat to Little Falls. There is no reason at all why the first stringers should risk chances of injury by playing them.

The Brainerd seconds will give the Little Falls first team plenty of action.

The Brainerd first team will be on the sidelines to watch Little Falls but will not be used. Dammann may send in Schuety and Marshall for only a short time.

Men who will see action tonight are White, McPherson, Franks, Larson, Templeton and Swanson.

Bariloche, Argentina, March 3.—(U.P.)—The Prince of Wales and Prince George were separated briefly today, the British heir having remained at Huemul with Carlos and Samuel Ortiz Basualdo, his hosts, while the younger prince returned to Bariloche.

International Survey Made of Marriage Relationship

Berlin, March 3.—(U.P.)—An English marriage is the most durable in the world, while the American variety, next to that of soviet Russia, holds the International record for brevity, a survey of the Reich statistical bureau showed today.

Divorce figures from all over the world brought forth many interesting sidelights on national matrimonial problems, among them the fact that the fifth to tenth years—not the first hundred—are the hardest, and that "war" marriages have proved the least successful.

The divorce courts of America and Russia grind out their decrees at a rate hardly to be compared with those of other countries, it was revealed.

Beginning with the soviet union, where the average is a mere matter of minutes, the number of divorces per year for each 100,000 inhabitants runs about as follows:

Russia, 305.7; United States, 163.3; Austria, 89.6; Japan, 79.1; Switzerland, 67.5; Denmark, 66; Germany, 61.6; and France, despite the legendary fickleness of its citizens in love, only 47.1.

In England there are only 8.6 divorces a year for every 100,000 people.

Tangoland Topnotchers

By HARDIN BURNLEY

TO the vast mass of North American sport bugs, the Argentine was only the land of the tango and Valentino movie romance prior to the arrival of Luis Firpo a few years ago. Tex Rickard all too swiftly built "The Wild Bull of the Pampas" into a match with Jack Dempsey, then at his peak. Firpo landed an accidental smash right after the opening gong, there were knockdowns galore, Luis staging one of the supreme thrills of ring annals when he flailed the dazed Mr Dempsey over the ropes. Jack got back and quickly flattened "The Wild Bull" soon after the second round started. Ever since, sport bugs identify the Argentine with Firpo and the most hectic minutes in heavyweight history.

While the Dempsey-Firpo epic will always serve as the prelude to the American public's view of Argentine sports, that big South American republic has many other far more substantial claims to real athletic fame.

In polo, for instance, it has produced some great teams and at least one extraordinary player, Luis Lacey, who is bringing some Argentine stars to compete with Uncle Sam's best this year.

One of these groups has been playing, usually in mixed teams, for more than a month on the Pacific Coast. It features Dan Kearney, Diego Cavanaha, Juan Reynal, and the Miles brothers. And if Lacey is still in good form, the Argentines have an excellent chance of returning next Fall with major polo honors for 1931.

Of more general interest, perhaps, is the future of Justo Suarez, the Argentine lightweight, who did well in the U. S. last year and who hopes to get a shot at the championship next Summer or Fall. Justo was indignant when set down for low punching by the New York boxing board last Fall and returned to Buenos Aires threatening never to return. But he'll be back soon to help make the fur fly among the 135-pound headliners.

Singer's sudden ascension to the favorite's post gave birth to all sorts of reports that the fight was "in the bag" for the lightweight champion. The reports died away when Singer hit the mat for good in the third round.

Belief that there might be something phony about Tut's knockout was strengthened by the Minnesota boxing commission and the National Boxing Association. Both bodies suspended the fighters, their managers and all fighters belonging to the same stables.

To most of the customers and boxing writers who viewed the fight it looked like the real thing. The action was whirlwind all the way.

State Ownership of Public Utilities Bill Passes in Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., March 3.—(U.P.)—State ownership and operation of Wisconsin public utilities received final legislative approval today, but will not become constitutional until ratified by the 1933 legislature and at a referendum.

The senate adopted the resolution for state ownership by a vote of 18 to 14, recently. The house added its approval today, 85 to 8.

DAMMANN TAKES NO CHANCES ON INJURIES TONIGHT

SECOND STRINGERS WILL BATTLE FALLS AS RELIEF QUINTET

INJURY AT THIS TIME TO ANY OF FIRST FIVE WOULD HANDICAP SQUAD

WILL ALSO PREVENT FALLS IN BUILDING UP DEFENSE AGAINST TEAM

Coach Bill Dammann will take no chances on injuries to his first string team so close to the tournament and will send his second stringers against the Little Falls team in the last game of the season tonight. The game will be played at the Little Falls high school at 8:15 o'clock with a preliminary game between the juniors of the Falls and Brainerd at 7:15 P. M.

Mr. Dammann is wise in this move because, barring injuries, Little Falls would be only too willing to meet the first five, thus building up a new defense and offense against the team that is doped to spoil their chances in tournament.

Brainerd previously administered a severe defeat to Little Falls. There is no reason at all why the first stringers should risk chances of injury by playing them.

The Brainerd seconds will give the Little Falls first team plenty of action.

The Brainerd first team will be on the sidelines to watch Little Falls but will not be used. Dammann may send in Schuety and Marshall for only a short time.

Men who will see action tonight are White, McPherson, Franks, Larson, Templeton and Swanson.

TWO ENGLISH PRINCES NOW IN ARGENTINA

Bariloche, Argentina, March 3.—(U.P.)—The Prince of Wales and Prince George were separated briefly today, the British heir having remained at Huemul with Carlos and Samuel Ortiz Basualdo, his hosts, while the younger prince returned to Bariloche.

The two princes played golf with their hosts at Huemul yesterday. Last night the Prince of Wales attended a dance at the Estancia, where the former Leonora Hughes, dancer, now the wife of Carlos Ortiz Basualdo, was his favorite partner.

Prince George planted a tree at the Huemul grounds as a memento of their visit before he came here to await the arrival of the Prince of Wales.

Buenos Aires, March 3.—(U.P.)—An unusual heat wave continued here today. There were many cases of sun stroke and several fatalities were reported.

The largest Spanish-speaking city in the world is not in Spain, but in South America—Buenos Aires.

International Survey Made of Marriage Relationship

Berlin, March 3.—(U.P.)—An English marriage is the most durable in the world, while the American variety, next to that of soviet Russia, holds the International record for brevity, a survey of the Reich statistical bureau showed today.

Divorce figures from all over the world brought forth many interesting sidelights on national matrimonial problems, among them the fact that the fifth to tenth years—not the first hundred—are the hardest, and that "war" marriages have proved the least successful.

The divorce courts of America and Russia grind out their decrees at a rate hardly to be compared with those of other countries, it was revealed.

Beginning with the soviet union, where the average is a mere matter of minutes, the number of divorces per year for each 100,000 inhabitants runs about as follows:

Russia, 305.7; United States, 163.3; Austria, 89.6; Japan, 79.1; Switzerland, 67.5; Denmark, 66; Germany, 61.6; and France, despite the legendary fickleness of its citizens in love, only 47.1.

In England there are only 8.6 divorces a year for every 100,000 people.

Tangoland Topnotchers

By HARDIN BURNLEY

TO the vast mass of North American sport bugs, the Argentine was only the land of the tango and Valentino movie romance prior to the arrival of Luis Firpo a few years ago. Tex Rickard all too swiftly built "The Wild Bull of the Pampas" into a match with Jack Dempsey, then at his peak. Firpo landed an accidental smash right after the opening gong, there were knockdowns galore, Luis staging one of the supreme thrills of ring annals when he flailed the dazed Mr. Dempsey over the ropes. Jack got back and quickly flattened "The Wild Bull" soon after the second round started. Ever since, sport bugs identify the Argentine with Firpo and the most hectic minutes in heavyweight history.

While the Dempsey-Firpo epic will always serve as the prelude to the American public's view of Argentine sports, that big South American republic has many other far more substantial claims to real athletic fame.

In polo, for instance, it has produced some great teams and at least one extraordinary player, Luis Lacey, who is bringing some Argentine stars to compete with Uncle Sam's best this year.

One of these groups has been playing, usually in mixed teams, for more than a month on the Pacific Coast. It features Dan Kearney, Diego Cavanaha, Juan Reynal, and the Miles brothers. And if Lacey is still in good form, the Argentines have an excellent chance of returning next Fall with major polo honors for 1931.

Of more general interest, perhaps, is the future of Justo Suarez, the Argentine lightweight, who did well in the U. S. last year and who hopes to get a shot at the championship next Summer or Fall. Justo was indignant when set down for low punching by the New York boxing board last Fall and returned to Buenos Aires threatening never to return. But he'll be back soon to help make the fur fly among the 135-pound headliners.

DENIES 'BUGS' MORAN IS IN WALWORTH COUNTY, WISCONSIN

Elkhorn, Wis., March 3.—(AP)—Newspaper stories that George "Bugs" Moran, Chicago gang leader, had moved into Walworth county and was setting up headquarters for racketeering, gambling and liquor running "are not true," District Attorney Arthur Thorson declared today.

Walworth county, he said, has:

No gangster.

No liquor wars.

No gambling houses.

Thorson made his announcement after conducting a John Doe investigation, in Wisconsin procedure tantamount to a one-man grand jury, in the person of Justice of the Peace George J. Belton.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to all our friends and neighbors who so kindly expressed their sympathy to us, in the loss of our dear wife and mother. The kind deeds and gifts of flowers will long be remembered by the family. Especially do we thank the N. W. Paper Co. and employees, the Eagles Lodge and B. A. Y. No. 6739.

"We take special precautionary measures on other business or industries on any hazardous conditions, so why exempt the hazard of flammable liquid storage? They are not an especial hazard when properly handled, but become an extreme hazard in the event of an accident, if the safety standards are not applied.

"Water is of no use in the extinguishment of a fire of this kind as it will only float the fire, thereby covering that much more territory, and any of the chemical extinguishing agents are of no avail unless the fire is confined, as it would be impractical to stock enough of them.

"St. Paul does not allow above ground storage of flammable liquids on their Wabasha, Minnesota, Robert or any other business streets, if not protected by dykes, or placed underground.

"Minneapolis does not allow it on Hennepin, Nicollet or Marquette. Duluth does not allow it on their Superior or any other main streets, and so on. Brainerd's Front, Laurel, 6th, 7th and 8th as well as other main streets, mean as much to our citizens as do the streets of other cities. So let us give our citizens and their property the same degree of protection that other cities do. If the oil companies do not care to dyke they may place their tanks underground by the terms of this ordinance.

"It is my duty to look to the safety of the men of my department as well as that of the public, and I feel that without this ordinance we are not giving the firemen or the public the protection to which they are entitled, and I feel that should we let existing conditions of flammable liquid storage remain as they are, that we will some day regret it.

"I would ask that you picture with me an accident (and an accident is only the lack of an intelligent preparation) that would allow the contents of a small gasoline storage tank (say ten thousand gallons) to flow on our streets and the property of the citizen. It would without doubt become ignited from some cause or other. It would be flowing into the sewers, causing explosions from beneath the streets and buildings, it would probably cause a loss of life, as well as the disabling of someone. It would perhaps affect an industry that would cause unemployment, or perhaps destroy one or more buildings that would not be rebuilt. The move to regulate the storage of flammable liquids is inevitable. It is being sponsored by all fire prevention organizations, and as it is something that will have to be done at some time, why not have it done before we have the experience of a disaster which the residents of our city will hold you and I accountable, if we do not legislate for their protection.

"As to the Northern Pacific, I believe that in a very short time it will be shown that this ordinance will materilaly benefit them. I will ask you to weigh well the results of a disaster such as I have endeavored to picture, against the expenditure of a few dollars by the dozen oil companies involved."

Alderman Anderson, chairman of the finance committee, reported the receipt of $2,775.07 in reimbursement of the poor fund from the county, $500 as the final payment from the county on the Mill Avenue drain and $796.50 in cigarette licenses from the state.

Thursday, February 19, Miss Ada Wunderlich entertained her six sisters at an afternoon quilting bee. The guests were Mrs. Berger Anderson, Mrs. Earl Borden, Mrs. Alfred Nelson, Mrs. Arvid Anderson, Mrs George McAlvie, and Mrs. Sam Varner. The eighth sister, Mrs. Edd Miller of Coeur d' Alene, Idaho, passed away in 1929. All the sisters have lived in the Miller Lake district since they were married excepting Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Miller. Miss Wunderlich served a nice lunch, assisted by Mrs. Nelson.

A shower, dance and basket supper was given at the Midland Hotel Saturday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott of Borden Lake who were recently married. There was a large number of merry makers present, and Mr. and Mrs. Scott received many nice presents.

Mrs. A. R. Knowlen gave a dinner Sunday for her grandchildren and some of their little cousins.

Mrs. J. N. Francis was a dinner guest at the A. H. Barber home Sunday. In the afternoon she called on Mrs. T. Enger and had supper at the Knowlen house.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn and Mr. and Mrs. W. Conklin of Brainerd were out to their cottages here Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn and Mrs. Lewis and children were out Monday and burned grass, also doing some other work.

Guests Sunday at the J. N. Harrison home, Pleasant Hill on Borden Lake, were Mr. and Mrs. Allen Christen and daughter Marvel and son Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Avery, all of Minneapolis, Mr. and Mrs. J. Avery and son Eugene of Brainerd and Mrs. McAlvie of Miller Lake.

On Monday Mrs. Jay Avery of Brainerd, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Avery of Minneapolis and Mr. and Mrs. Dodge of Brainerd walked across Borden Lake and climbed the Warren Hill to the fire tower. From the top of the tower a wonderful view of the surrounding country can be had.

Mrs. Herman Smith entertained the Miller Lake ladies club last week. The ladies worked on a quilt for Mrs. Smith. All members were present with the exception of Mrs. Walter Wunderlich.

On Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Benjamin, Mrs. Floyd Davis and Mrs. Frank Benjamin, Jr., took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin at Way Side farm, it being Mr. Benjamin's 72nd birthday anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Knowlen and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Knowlen spent Tuesday evening at the Thomas Scott home at the Willows. They visited and played 500.

Mrs. J. N. Francis was a dinner guest at the Earl Borden home Thursday, and also called on Mrs. Clifton Knowlen. Mrs. Benjamin spent the same evening at the J. N. Harrison home.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hill were callers at the Linden house on Friday.

The writer made an error in news last week, by mistake leaving out the names of Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson and Mr. and Mrs. Lingwell from the list of guests at the A. R. Knowlen birthday party.

Mrs. George Hill of Garrison had as guests Friday Mrs. Clifton Knowlen, Mrs. Lem Gilem, Mrs. Perry Borden, Mrs. Metzer and as dinner guest Mrs. J. N. Francis of Round Lake.

Mrs. Eddie O'Neill of Auburn, Wash., daughter of Mrs. J. N. Francis, wrote that she had recently as her evening guests Mr. and Mrs. William O'Neill, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Curry (formerly Grace O'Neill), Mr. and Mrs. Arlee Renshaw (formerly Lizzie O'Neill). The O'Neills are all children of Mrs. Ike Tift. Mrs. Gullings of Brainerd is another daughter of Mrs. Tift. Mr. and Mrs. Curry will leave soon for Milwaukee, Wis., for their home in Washington, going by way of Los Angeles where they have spent the major part of the winter. The O'Neills formerly lived in the Cutler neighborhood where they have many friends and relatives.

Think of it! Every fourth second! Just count them off! One, two, three, four—another Riverside sold. One, two, three, four—still another! and so on through the day. Every fourth second a new rugged Riverside goes out into the world to roll up its thousands of miles of dependable tire service.

Every Riverside Tire Is a First Quality Tire!

There are several grades of tires. When you're quoted a price on a tire, ask "Is this a first quality tire or a second line tire." Don't let anybody quote second line tire prices against Riversides—because Riversides are first line tires—and should be compared only with first line tires.

No Other Tire Can Give a Greater Guarantee!

—because Riverside's guarantee is UNLIMITED. Unlimited in time—unlimited in mileage! Who can give more than that? Who could ASK more! So why pay MORE when Riversides give all that can be given!

Save 10% to 15%!

This is the average saving on Riversides compared with other FIRST LINE tires. And remember, Riversides are FIRST LINE tires! No wonder another Riverside is sold every four seconds!

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Nancy Hollenbeck, young, vibrant and beautiful, becomes cynical toward love when she gives up Mat Tully at her mother's request because he is poor. She encourages the attentions of Jack Beamer, wealthy married man, who, enamored of Nancy, wishes to divorce his wife. On a mountain trip, Nancy falls in love with a handsome ranger, Roger Decatur. Leaving her chaperones, the rich Porters, Nancy, after a violent but brief courtship, secretly marries Roger. Her folks at home wonder at her continued absence.

"The first time you leave me I'll probably go home."

CHAPTER XIX.

ONCE Roger went out to hunt up some government official —something to do with his work—and left her alone.

"I won't miss you a bit. I'll do a little illegal washing in the wash basin. Maybe I'll even darn a stocking!" she told him, laughing.

But when he was gone and she dragged the suitcases out from under the bed, and poked and pushed through their rumpled contents, her high spirits oozed away. She didn't know where to start, there was so much to do. Louise had always done their mending and washing. She felt discouraged and helpless, surrounded by crumpled silks and sad looking linens. Even the coral chiffon dressing gown looked limp, and the French flowers on one satin mule were loose.

And the room was terrible. Sticky varnish on the dresser. None too clean lace curtains at the windows. "I wish we'd taken a chance and gone to the good hotel!" she moaned, but that was impossible, of course, with the Porters likely to turn up any minute. For that matter, she might run into Anita Beamer, staying at the palatial Riverside, where all the divorcees and everyone who was anyone stayed in Reno.

The Warning

Anita Beamer, here in Reno getting a divorce so that Jack could marry her, Nancy...Poor Jack! How disappointed he would be when he knew that she had jilted him for a ranger...a poor ranger who didn't mind awful hotels, and didn't know the difference between new clothes and old..."It's so funny!" she thought, giggling helplessly. She thought she was laughing, but her eyes were wet, so she must be crying instead. Roger found her, a wilted little heap beside the scattered clothes on the floor when he came back.

"Don't leave me! Don't leave me again!" she wailed, and he lifted her in his strong arms and comforted her and laughed at her and they were both happy again.

"The first time you leave me all day I'll probably go home to mama!" she laughed, looking up at him adoringly with wet, velvety eyes.

"Oh, I guess not!" But it frightened him a little. He loved her more every day, but he realized that he didn't know her as well as he thought he did. She was so independent up there in the High Sierras, and now she was so soft and clinging. She sure cares a lot for me!! he thought, half humble, half exulting. "My Nancy!"

It was only when she was clinging that Nancy felt that she knew him at all. Sometimes, seeing him at a little distance or hearing him speak to some man about something she knew nothing about, he was a stranger. "That's my husband! I'm married to him," she marveled.

In the church where they were married he had looked so strange and unfamiliar, with his unruly hair slicked down and his funny little toothbrush moustache shaved too close, that it was all she could do to make the proper responses, and not cry out — 'Oh wait — wait — I'm not sure — I'm afraid I'm getting the wrong man!"

Waking sometimes in the night, with Roger sleeping quietly beside her, she cried in the darkness because her world had turned upside down and she was all alone in a strange, queer place.

Now, with Roger's arms about her, his cheek against hers, she was happy, in spite of the shabby room, her disreputable trousseau, her unquiet thoughts about mama.

"I do love you," she murmured again, contentedly.

"Well, you ought to tell your mother—"

"Old maid!" she teased. Suddenly she flung her arms tight around his neck, almost choking him, kissing him wildly, again and again. "Roger, I do love you—I do! I do!"

He crushed her to him, bruising her soft flesh, smothering her with passionate kisses. His arms were bands of steel, the rough khaki of his coat scratched her face, but she made no sound. She lay limp in his arms, drunk with happiness.

Minutes passed. Or was it hours? Nancy's eyes were closed. Her thick lashes lay dark on her flushed cheek. Roger roused himself, kissed her closed eyelids. "But just the same, you ought to write to your mother, old lady!"

"All right," she said, after a long pause.

Conflicting Emotions

He went back to his papers. From where she sat at the ink-stained hotel desk she could see him out of the corner of her eye. A big, blond man in the olive drab of a ranger. Reading the newspaper in a cheap hotel in Reno. Absorbed in it already.

"That's my husband. I'm married to him," she whispered to herself. A big tear dropped, blotting the ink, spoiling her letter.

Nancy thought she hated Reno. "We can't leave too soon to please me!" she told Roger, over and over. "I'll be just as glad to get out of here as you'll be, honey," he said, and she knew he was hurrying, trying to finish the work that had brought him there.

On the fourth afternoon he went over to the Riverside Hotel to meet two government officials motoring south. It seemed funny to think of Roger at the Riverside while she waited in their hot little home on the other side of town.

"I wish we'd gone there and taken a chance," she told herself for the hundredth time. "It would have been exciting to be over there where all the really smart people stay." . . . But that might have meant a meeting with the Porters or Jack Beamer's wife, and Nancy wasn't really ready for that. She wore Roger Decatur's ring on her finger, an unimpressive platinum band . . . Jack Beamer would have given her a circlet of diamonds or emeralds; not that she cared, she insisted loyally. She'd rather wear Roger's utilitarian wedding ring than a pear-shaped diamond from Jack . . . I still . . . plenty of time to tell about it. I spite of "Mrs. Decatur" on the hotel register, and moments when she could hardly remember that she had ever been single, she still thought of herself as Nancy Hollenbeck. Sometimes she found herself planning, "When I go home." . . . But of course she wasn't going home . . . she was going on with Roger, forever and ever.

And whenever she thought of life without him her knees felt weak and she wanted to cry. She did cry a little this afternoon, thinking of him at the Riverside, hobnobbing with notables, beautiful jewelled divorcees passing in and out, and she stuck in this dingy, ugly little room!

Dissatisfied

But she knew it was silly, so she bathed her reddened eyes and put on her best dress, the beige crepe de chine, and went for a walk.

The loungers in the lobby turned and stared after her. "I suppose they think I'm a divorcee, too!" she thought, and the very idea of it amused her so that she looked right at a fat man in a loud checked suit, and laughed.

Where can you walk in a strange town? Nancy followed the main street, past rows of pleasant looking houses and over a bridge. She didn't know which way to go then, so she walked back on the other side of the street, and reached the hotel half an hour later, hot, tired and cross.

It was such a relief to find Roger back and waiting for her that she fairly flung herself into his arms, rubbing her hot, pink cheeks against his cool, brown one, showering him with absurd, mumbling kisses. "Roger, I DO love you but I hate this horrid place. Can't we go soon?"

No Basic African Language

Ethnologists have failed so far to find a common root language of the African, or negro, people. There are many dialects, and in many cases a dialect used by natives of one tribe not far removed physically from another is unintelligible to the other tribe.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Nancy Hollenbeck, young, vibrant and beautiful, becomes cynical toward love when she gives up Mat Tully at her mother's request because he is poor. She encourages the attentions of Jack Peamer, wealthy married man, who, enamored of Nancy, wishes to divorce his wife. On a mountain trip, Nancy falls in love with a handsome ranger, Roger Decatur. Leaving her chaperones, the rich Porters, Nancy, after a violent but brief courtship, secretly marries Roger. Her folks at home wonder at her continued absence.

"The first time you leave me I'll probably go home."

CHAPTER XIX.

ONCE Roger went out to hunt up some government official —something to do with his work—and left her alone.

"I won't miss you a bit. I'll do a little illegal washing in the wash basin. Maybe I'll even darn a stocking!" she told him, laughing.

But when he was gone and she dragged the suitcases out from under the bed, and poked and pushed through their rumpled contents, her high spirits oozed away. She didn't know where to start, there was so much to do. Louise had always done their mending and washing. She felt discouraged and helpless, surrounded by crumpled silks and sad looking linens. Even the coral chiffon dressing gown looked limp, and the French flowers on one satin mule were loose.

And the room was terrible. Sticky varnish on the dresser. None too clean lace curtains at the windows. "I wish we'd taken a chance and gone to the good hotel!" she moaned, but that was impossible, of course, with the Porters likely to turn up any minute. For that matter, she might run into Anita Beamer, staying at the palatial Riverside, where all the divorcees and everyone who was anyone stayed in Reno.

The Warning

Anita Beamer, here in Reno getting a divorce so that Jack could marry her, Nancy...Poor Jack! How disappointed he would be when he knew that she had jilted him for a ranger...a poor ranger who didn't mind awful hotels, and didn't know the difference between new clothes and old..."It's so funny!" she thought, giggling helplessly. She thought she was laughing, but her eyes were wet, so she must be crying instead. Roger found her, a wilted little heap beside the scattered clothes on the floor when he came back.

"Don't leave me! Don't leave me again!" she wailed, and he lifted her in his strong arms and comforted her and laughed at her and they were both happy again.

"The first time you leave me all day I'll probably go home to mama!" she laughed, looking up at him adoringly with wet, velvety eyes.

"Oh, I guess not!" But it frightened him a little. He loved her more every day, but he realized that he didn't know her as well as he thought he did. She was so independent up there in the High Sierras, and now she was so soft and clinging. She sure cares a lot for me!! he thought, half humble, half exulting. "My Nancy!"

It was only when she was clinging that Nancy felt that she knew him at all. Sometimes, seeing him at a little distance or hearing him speak to some man about something she knew nothing about, he was a stranger. "That's my husband! I'm married to him," she marveled.

In the church where they were married he had looked so strange and unfamiliar, with his unruly hair slicked down and his funny little toothbrush moustache shaved too close, that it was all she could do to make the proper responses, and not cry out — 'Oh wait — wait — I'm not sure — I'm afraid I'm getting the wrong man!"

Waking sometimes in the night, with Roger sleeping quietly beside her, she cried in the darkness because her world had turned upside down and she was all alone in a strange, queer place.

Now, with Roger's arms about her, his cheek against hers, she was happy, in spite of the shabby room, her disreputable trousseau, her unquiet thoughts about mama.

"I do love you," she murmured again, contentedly.

"Well, you ought to tell your mother—"

"Old maid!" she teased. Suddenly she flung her arms tight around his neck, almost choking him, kissing him wildly, again and again. "Roger, I do love you—I do! I do!"

He crushed her to him, bruising her soft flesh, smothering her with passionate kisses. His arms were bands of steel, the rough khaki of his coat scratched her face, but she made no sound. She lay limp in his arms, drunk with happiness.

Minutes passed. Or was it hours? Nancy's eyes were closed. Her thick lashes lay dark on her flushed cheek. Roger roused himself, kissed her closed eyelids. "But just the same, you ought to write to your mother, old lady!"

"All right," she said, after a long pause.

Conflicting Emotions

He went back to his papers. From where she sat at the inkstained hotel desk she could see him out of the corner of her eye. A big, blond man in the olive drab of a ranger. Reading the newspaper in a cheap hotel in Reno. Absorbed in it already.

"That's my husband. I'm married to him," she whispered to herself. A big tear dropped, blotting the ink, spoiling her letter.

Nancy thought she hated Reno. "We can't leave too soon to please me!" she told Roger, over and over. "I'll be just as glad to get out of here as you'll be, honey," he said, and she knew he was hurrying, trying to finish the work that had brought him there.

On the fourth afternoon he went over to the Riverside Hotel to meet two government officials motoring south. It seemed funny to think of Roger at the Riverside while she waited in their hot little home on the other side of town.

"I wish we'd gone there and taken a chance," she told herself for the hundredth time. "It would have been exciting to be over there where all the really smart people stay." . . . But that might have meant a meeting with the Porters or Jack Beamer's wife, and Nancy wasn't really ready for that. She wore Roger Decatur's ring on her finger, an unimpressive platinum band . . . Jack Beamer would have given her a circlet of diamonds or emeralds; not that she cared, she insisted loyally. She'd rather wear Roger's utilitarian wedding ring than a pear-shaped diamond from Jack . . . still . . . plenty of time to tell about it. In spite of "Mrs. Decatur" on the hotel register, and momentarily when she could hardly remember that she had ever been single, she still thought of herself as Nancy Hollenbeck. Sometimes she found herself planning, "When I go home." . . . But of course she wasn't going home . . . she was going on with Roger, forever and ever.

And whenever she thought of life without him her knees felt weak and she wanted to cry. She did cry a little this afternoon, thinking of him at the Riverside, hobnobbing with notables, beautiful jewelled divorcees passing in and out, and she stuck in the dingy, ugly little room!

Dissatisfied

But she knew it was silly, so she bathed her reddened eyes and put on her best dress, the beige crepe de chine, and went for a walk.

The loungers in the lobby turned and stared after her. "I suppose they think I'm a divorcee, too!" she thought, and the very idea of it amused her so that she looked right at a fat man in a loud checked suit, and laughed.

Where can you walk in a strange town? Nancy followed the main street, past rows of pleasant looking houses and over a bridge. She didn't know which way to go then, so she walked back on the other side of the street, and reached the hotel half an hour later, hot, tired and cross.

It was such a relief to find Roger back and waiting for her that she fairly flung herself into his arms, rubbing her hot, pink cheeks against his cool, brown one showering him with absurd, mumbling kisses. "Roger, I DO love you but I hate this horrid place. Can't we go soon?"
